

SAC offers Funtime as year's kickoff

by Gary Hogg and Tom Zach

Do you have the back to school blues? Humber College's Students Association Council (SAC) hopes to lift your spirits by bringing you 'Funtime', this year's title for the annual orientation week beginning Monday.

SAC President Joe Gauci said fun will be the theme for the week-long festivities featuring noon-hour concerts, a frisbee demonstration, and this semester's first Pub Night.

Seventy per cent of the 8,000 students at Humber come from outside the Boroughs of Etobicoke and York, said Gauci. Orientation week will provide these students with a chance to get to know the college and meet new friends.

Gauci said the week will give new students a chance to get acquainted with SAC and to learn what services it provides. The Games Room, weekly movies, clubs, legal aid, and of course the pub are a few of the activities and services SAC offers.

"SAC is here for a good time," said Gauci. "We want people to know what SAC is all about."

However, Gauci did stress the week is not only aimed at new students. He said returning students will have a good time too.

During the week SAC will be presenting live bands in the concourse and at the pub. Or Tuesday, country and western band The Hatfields will play a noon hour concert in the concourse and then move to the pub for a 3 p.m. show. The Extras will be featured at noon on Thursday and will also play at this semester's first Pub Night. Friday's mid-day concert will feature Beach Boys music performed by Gargano.

In the concourse on Monday, SAC will sponsor the Teeny Tiny Terrible Trike Race. Also, Bully Hill will play in the Coffee House at 1 p.m.

Tuesday will be Western Day. SAC will show the movie "Blazing Saddles" and there will be a Western Day Barbeque in the Amphitheatre at noon.

On Wednesday, a frisbee demonstration will be featured in the Amphitheatre at 1 p.m. A free lunch and a speaker will be offered at the Sandwich Seminar in Caps. Also in Caps, local comedy troupe the Frantics will perform from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m.

At noon on Thursday, SAC will provide two hours of free roller skating including the bus ride and skate rentals. And, of course, the first Pub Night will begin at 6 p.m.

General meeting hears arguments for rejection

by Don Redmond

Humber College teachers vote today on whether to accept or reject the contract offer put forth by the government. Today's vote will not put the teachers in a strike situation if they reject the offer, but will send the mediators back into negotiation.

Teachers packed into the Seventh Semester late Wednesday afternoon to hear Eric Lord, negotiator for the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU).

Before introducing Lord to the teachers, meeting chairman Gary Begg, OPSEU president for local 562 (which represents Humber's teachers), emphasized that rejecting the government offer would not mean the teachers were voting to strike.

The offer made by the government calls for a 10.5 per cent pay increase, increased life insurance benefits and complete OHIP coverage paid by the college as well as other benefit improvements.

Urged to reject

Lord urged the teachers to reject the contract offer, pointing out flaws in the sick leave clause, wage offer, job security clause and the workload.

Lord said while a teacher at the top of the pay scale may benefit by a 10.5 per cent pay increase, those at the bottom or middle of the scale would not gain so much in dollars.

Most of the teachers seemed to agree with Lord's urging of a contract rejection. One teacher was heartily applauded when she said, "If you don't like the contract, reject it. There is no need to be a complete doormat!"

Some are leery

However, some teachers appeared leery of the possibility of a strike. When one teacher stated that he didn't want to be left standing in the parking lot for half of one per cent difference (between the government offer and the union's request) the group burst into applause.

The meeting did have some high points. A librarian, who obviously felt her department got the short end of the stick in the last contract settlement, asked what the librarians were traded off for this time. Lord replied, "The librarians are still on the table".

Amidst howling laughter from the teachers, Lord corrected his faux pas by saying the librarians' negotiations were still on the table.

Lord finished his speech by criticizing the government, saying the "quality of education in this province doesn't mean a damn to them (the government), it's only the almighty buck!"

The teachers' vote takes place today in the Concourse throughout the day.

Photo dept. moves to double shifts

by Dave Silburt

The first-year creative photography program has expanded to a double shift system this year, to make more efficient use of the lab facilities during late afternoon and evenings, according to part-time studies co-ordinator Bill Bayes.

In addition, a change of policy by Photography program co-ordinator Adam Sedgewick will mean any use of photo department chemicals by students of other departments will be accounted for and duly billed to the "parent course" of the students involved.

"It's a hard-nosed affair," admitted Sedgewick, "but we went broke last year."

"I'm not going to make any friends over this; I'm the first to admit it."

Bayes said the scheduling change would allow "swing-shift" students to continue holding full time jobs.

"In the short run, (part-time students) are out of luck," Bayes said, because the addition of the "swing shift" from 2:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. would curtail off-hour use by part-timers.

But the long-term benefit would be a broader range of courses, and more cost-efficient use of existing facilities, he said.

"Financially, it makes more sense."

And since the recent closing of Conestoga College's photography program has created a greater influx of applicants to Humber's course, according to Sedgewick, the oversupply of applicants must be handled by greater efficiency in the use of what we have.

Larry Holmes, dean of the Creative and Communication Arts (CCA) division, stressed the need for efficiency in the use of photo labs and darkrooms.

"If we pay an instructor $20 per hour, we need 20 students in that class," to make it cost-efficient, said Holmes.

He agreed that oversupply of applicants to the photography course makes it essential to use facilities very completely, to accommodate them.

Positive reaction from students, he said, has more than offset any negative reaction, and some who initially complained about the scheduling changed their attitudes when their options were more fully explained to them.

By making scheduling changes in this way, Bayes said access to the College in general would be improved.

"It's an experiment in opening up access to the College," he said.

"This is really the way we would like to see things happen with a lot of our courses."

"We're thinking now of...interior decorating and fine arts."

But in photography, full use of the labs by regular classes will also mean a cut-off to others, such as journalism students, who were previously using them in off-hours.

"That could be a real problem," admitted Bayes.

Although lack of off-hours during the week will be partially compensated for by opening the labs on weekends, they will be open only to photography students, not to journalism.

Said Sedgewick: "This is where the crunch will come."

But a cutoff of lab facilities to what he terms "service courses" (journalism and public relations) will be accompanied by the detailed accounting of the use of chemicals, the cost of which has risen markedly.

Staff help sought to 'master' plan

by Doug Devine

Several major changes in the structure of Humber College were presented to faculty members for consideration over the summer, as the college's administrators attempt to formulate a long-term academic master plan.

"Over the next month we will be developing an academic master plan for at least the next five years," explained Tom Norton, vice-president academic, "and through these proposals (presented to the faculty) we've invited everyone to become involved in the plan."

The proposals involve the relocation of several divisions within the college in an attempt to integrate both the business and technology programs at the North Campus. Under the proposed plan the Creative and Communication Arts Division would be moved to the Lakeshore campus and the technology and business programs offered at Lakeshore would join those offered at North.

Other proposals include moving the nursing program to North campus; abandoning Lakeshore 2, the Industrial Resource Centre, Keele, and the York-Eglinton Centre; and purchasing a new campus in the Borough of York.

According to Norton, the proposals are the result of several major studies conducted for the college over the past few years, including the recent study on Humber's role in the Borough of York.

He said the administration must plan now for things five years down the line.

"You have to go through a lot of negotiating whenever you start changing paths within the system," said Norton.

"If we want to start anything for next Sept. the master plan will have to be done by Nov. 1."

The faculty was given until Aug. 31 to voice any opinions on the proposals and Norton said although there wasn't much reaction to the plan, there was some "very thoughtful input" from those who did reply.

Course-related jobs found

by Paul Goodwin

Take heart anyone who feels they're stuck in a nowhere course without a future. Though you may already be knee-deep in work, it will all pay off, according to Placement Director Martha Casson.

There are course-related jobs for graduates everywhere, she said. And the proof lies in the fact that approximately 91 per cent of Humber's 1979-80 graduating class found jobs in their related fields.

"Job notices just poured in (during the summer)," said Casson, "in all areas such as health sciences, creative arts, business and technology."

"We're much further ahead with students finding jobs than at the same time last year," she added.

Placement of technology grads reached 90 per cent, the highest in all divisions. However, 75 to 85 per cent of the graduates from other divisions found jobs in their related fields.

Statistics for the number of 1980-81 graduates who located jobs will not be available until November.

Casson, however, is expecting equally good results this year and she said job opportunities are still coming in.

On top of all this good news is more good news. Casson reports most of last April's successful job-hunting grads say they're happy with their placements.

Students watch suds drinkers at CNE

by Carolyn Leitch

This summer the thousands of beer drinkers at the Carlsberg Pavilion at the CNE downed their suds under the watchful eyes of Humber law enforcement students.

Bill Anderson, a law enforcement teacher who supervised the six participating students, said his team did not encounter any serious problems during the 20 days of the CNE.

He attributed the success of the operation to the first-year students who participated.

"I'm really proud to be associated with those students," Anderson said. "They did a terrific job."

Anderson selected burly students and said their size helped intimidate some of the more rowdy patrons.

The students checked identification at the door to keep out underaged drinkers. They tried to head off potential problems by suggesting some of the more enthusiastic drinkers slow down, or by cutting them off entirely.

Anderson said the students tried to follow a policy of non-violence.

"Let's face it, Canadians are not social drinkers," he said. "They were downing as much beer as they could, as fast as they could." Once when a fight threatened to erupt, Anderson's team put an end to the problem by yelling "police!" and separating the drinkers before any punches were thrown.

Anderson said the job was nerve-racking for the students, but he added they could not have received better experience.

Creative and Communication Arts (CCA) division Dean Larry Holmes addressed this year's crop of CCA students in an early orientation meeting on Thursday, Sept. 3.

Early CCA orientation successful

by Tony Poland

School's begun, and it began earlier for some than for others.

Creative and Communicative Arts Division (CCA) held its program and college orientation day five days earlier than Humber's official fall opening and the response was mostly favourable.

"It was confusing but no bother. It was a lot handier than coming on Tuesday (Sept. 8)," said first year graphics student Gayle Livingstone. "I'm looking forward to school now."

The idea for early orientation came from CCA dean Larry Holmes.

"When I proposed it, everybody told me it wouldn't work."

However, Holmes said "Ninety one per cent of the first year students attended."

He said there were two reasons for the early orientation. The first was because the semester started later in the year than usual and it was important to begin right away. The second reason for early orientation was to eliminate chaos, he said.

Holmes said the advantages of program orientation outweighed the problems of students having to come in early. Students could buy books, and get parking and locker problems sorted out.

Enrolment increased this year

by Janice Boyda and Cindy Hartwick

Full-time enrolment at Humber College for the 1981 school year is up from last year in spite of a 10 per cent tuition hike, according to Registrar Fred Embree.

Embree said the college is operating at full capacity now, with 8,000 full-time students.

He said the tuition increase did not have a big impact on enrolment because it was a "small fee increase overall."

Night school figures have shown an increase of 15-25 per cent, Embree added.

Current enrolment may change during the first 10 days of school because some students switch to part-time studies or withdraw completely. Therefore, an accurate figure will not be available until next week, he said.

However, many of the students used the time to sit around the Pipe and Holmes said others gathered in front of the lecture theatre as early as an hour before the college orientation started.

"A lot could have been going on," he said. "There were periods of time when people sat 'idle.'" Next year Holmes hopes to have tours and a coffee house as part of the orientation program.

He admitted there were some mechanical and clerical problems to be worked out. Two girls who came in for orientation had trouble moving into the Osler residence as their lease didn't start until Sept. 5. However, Osler opened their doors to the two girls early.

Student Association Council president Joe Gauci, who gave a speech to the first year CCA students said he thought the orientation was successful, but he would like to see a few changes.

Gauci said the orientation should include payment of fees, selection of electives and program and college orientation, all done on the same day.

"It was good because it lets first year students meet, or at least see, the teachers," he said.

However, Holmes said payment of fees on the same day will not be possible as fee payment is the only form of student identification.

When payments are made, students are registered in the office and their course cards are made up. Without the cards the students cannot be registered in the class.

Holmes said the CCA division will have early registration next year.

"The students in first year will recognize the pattern. It becomes familiar."

Holmes said next year he hopes other divisions will join him in the early orientation.

Support staff offer 'satisfactory': Jones

by Sandor Szalay

A threatened strike by Humber's support staff union may have been averted, following a new contract offer described by union president Joan Jones as "very satisfying."

Jones predicted the offer will be unanimously accepted by support staff, which includes college maintenance and technical employees.

She attributed the success of the talks to a "wonderful negotiating team who worked extremely hard to get a good contract settlement."

According to Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) local 563 treasurer Don Stevens, "it's the best offer we have ever accepted for a one-year contract."

The contract includes a 9 per cent wage increase and a 15 cent hourly across-the-board wage hike, said Stevens.

Other benefits revealed by Jones and Stevens are a new job security clause making it more difficult to lay off members.

The clause specifies that if more than five members are to be laid off, there must be an immediate conference between the union and management.

In addition, shift premiums for employees working after midnight will increase from 25 to 40 cents an hour if the contract is ratified, said Stevens.

He explained short-term disability benefits will rise from 66 to 75 per cent, and long-term benefits will include a new dental plan and total OHIP premium coverage by Humber.

Microfiche lists data

by Toni Tenuta

In an attempt to improve the efficiency of the card catalogue system, a Computer Output Microfiche system has been installed in the library.

According to a library pamphlet, the catalogue is now printed on microfiche, a transparent slide which lists all necessary bibliographic data.

The microfiche is produced by the computer, which holds the library's records, and allows students to check the holdings from all Humber campuses.

Ho hum

As the Student Association Council gets its annual programs underway, we are once again faced with the burning question: who cares about apathy?

SAC is supposed to represent all students and pursue the interests of the student body, yet how many students take an active part in SAC, or even show an interest in the programs they launch?

How many students take the trouble to vote in SAC elections each year? Ironically, the new generation who will remake the world show the same apathetic attitude in student elections as does the population at large in federal and provincial elections—sometimes worse.

As in "real-world" politics, the vast majority of the student electorate sit back complacently and allow a tiny minority to decide how, and by whom, they will be governed.

And when the duly elected SAC representatives work long and hard to arrange student participation events, such as those of orientation week, all too often the student body reacts with a hearty ho-hum.

To improve student involvement, SAC is also promoting a postcard campaign, to gain signatures in support of issues important to students.

What will this year's response be to the efforts of the student council? If we all continue to be as apathetic as in years gone by, maybe we don't deserve a student government.

We have our democratic rights, and we should exercise them. We students should show more interest in SAC events, put forth suggestions and support the issues we feel deserve support. Otherwise, we put ourselves in the same position as if we had essentially no representation, and were simply being shepherded from class to class like vapid six-year-olds.

It's time for Humber students to appreciate having a voice in the running of the College. Don't just sit back and complain about things—do something.

And while you're at it, let's enjoy the fun events for which SAC is also responsible.

SAC is a privilege. Use it or lose it.

Generation gap

A certain well-known celebrity has been known to say, as he grins unctuously through prime time television cameras into millions of suburban living rooms, that to have a Coke is to smile.

Especially, we might add, if you can save a nickel. For the time being, SAC's Coke machines in CAPS and the games room are underselling Pepsi by five cents a can. Couple that with everyone's favorite funnyman assuring us Coke sells the most and we should therefore buy it for that reason alone, and we could well have a winner in the ongoing pop wars—at least at Humber.

But wait a minute. Are we not the Pepsi generation? And if so, do we not abdicate our youth by drinking Coke, which by implication must be a drink for little old ladies, like tea or gin?

Troublesome points to ponder, as we weigh the merits of thrift against the slightly extra cost of membership in the "now" generation.

Yet even the thriftiness of a Coke and a smile may fade, as the effervescence of a Coke or a smile fades when left too long ignored. The price of Coke may soon rise to that of a Pepsi and hundreds of impecunious (but thirsty) students could be caught with their nickels down.

But all is not lost. We can still enter the cloistered confines of CAPS, swill a beer and have a smile...

Women celebrate emancipation day

by Judy Hughes

Women throughout the college will celebrate their emancipation on Oct. 18 with the help of the college's Affirmative Action for Women (AAFW) program, according to Doris Tallon, executive assistant to President Gordon Wragg.

Person's Day, remembered as the day women received voting rights, is just one of the many upcoming events sponsored by the AAFW program.

Tallon who is the college's women's advisor, has revealed plans for a variety of AAFW functions slated for the current semester. During the next few months, faculty and students will be invited to attend debates, luncheons, seminars and films aimed at promoting and preserving women's rights.

Among the guest speakers are Molly Pellecchia, a Board of Governors member and graduate of Humber's business administration course, and Peg Eiler, chairman of the Human Studies division.

The AAFW program was initiated at Humber in 1975, and its services have expanded considerably since then. Tallon, the co-ordinator of the program, considers the AAFW program both a monitoring and advisory body. She regularly receives inquiries about such diverse issues as abortion, legal aid, family planning and career referrals.

She said one of the benefits of an AAFW program is the development of patronage systems for women similar to those used by some men. A patronage system provides contacts and easier entry into the professional world for men and women without previous experience.

There are also benefits of an AAFW for employers. Humber President Gordon Wragg said "an Affirmative Action program is important if for no other reason than to encourage women to overcome any feelings of inadequacy or inferiority in society by virtue of their historical role."

UNICEF needs more helpers

Dear Sir:

I would once again like to ask for your assistance in the promotion of UNICEF Ontario.

As you know, during the fall months UNICEF Ontario conducts its major fund-raising programs on behalf of approximately 500 million children in the developing countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America.

UNICEF-funded projects in over 110 countries provide these children with improved nutrition, education, health care and sanitation facilities.

In order to ensure that UNICEF can assist these children, we need volunteers to help us conduct the fundraising programs.

Your assistance last year was most successful in recruiting new volunteers; we are sure the same will apply this year.

Thank you in advance for any help that you may be able to give us.

Sincerely yours,
Judy Hobbs

Speak Easy

by MaryLou Bernardo

After blowing the cobwebs off my "The Sleazy and Notorious Lives of Journalists" textbook, I realized summer was really over.

Oh my God, no more beach-bumming for eight months, no more waking up to the smell of a delicious breakfast, clean laundry and the arms of a loving Mom.

I sacrificed the above for an education. It's back to the Toronto apartment; back to the echoes of the pianist downstairs who thinks he's Liberace, and back to the echoes of the energetic newlyweds upstairs.

It's also back to my very own cooking (poisoning thyself). My gourmet entourages of Kraft a-la Kraft Dinner and my specialty of ketchup sandwiches on whole wheat bread.

But enough complaints about apartment life and my cooking. After shrinking my $45 shetland wool sweater from a large to an extra-extra small, I realized my domestic talent ranged much further than I anticipated. Oh well, my cat can wear the sweater.

Malnutrition, a noisy apartment and tight clothes—maybe I'll survive. Oh excuse me, I have to go, there has been a massive explosion. I accidentally overloaded the washer. I'm up to my ankles in suds and to top it off Liberace is playing Al Martino's Greatest Hits. But maybe—just maybe—I'll survive another year of schooling out-of-town.

Early birds out in force

This year for the first time the Communication and Creative Arts Division of Humber College held an early Orientation Day for its students. On Sept. 4, the students reported to their individual programs where they received their timetables and other necessary materials. The brainchild of CCA dean Larry Holmes, the day proved a success and enabled students to carry out their "signing on" activities ahead of the rest of the college. Students were welcomed by the dean in the lecture theatre and he feels the program was a success and plans to develop it further in future years. Students turned out in force, as many as 91 per cent of first-year students attending and having the advantage of being able to settle in during a relatively calm period. Coven photographer Dave Silburt turned out to record the event.

Two of the strikers involved in the labor spat at Spats man their posts on behalf of the union. Management shall not run roughshod over these crusaders...or at least not until they get back.

Watering hole dries up

by Chris Ballard

One of Humber students' favourite watering holes—Spats—is embroiled in a labor dispute and as a result business hours have been cut.

Eight members of local 280 of the International Beverage Dispensers and Bartenders Union were locked out by management of the Ascot Inn after negotiations between the union and hotel association (to which the Ascot belongs) broke down.

"We've reduced our hours of business and now we're open from 7:00 p.m. to closing," said Spats manager Herb Lopes.

He added the shorter hours will remain in effect until the dispute is settled.

"It's very interesting, but no one at Spats wanted a strike," said Lopes.

"People at Spats didn't want a wage increase but they had to strike because their union went out." Lopes added Spats was forced to lock out union members because it's tied to the association's decision.

A spokesman for the union local was unavailable for comment.

Hawk Shop moving to athletics area

by Kevin Paterson

Students looking for the Hawk Shop-Humber's retail outlet for athletic equipment and clothing—may soon wonder where it has disappeared to.

Students Association Council (SAC) President Joe Gauci said the Hawk Shop will move from its present location, next to CAPS, to the section of the athletics area where vending machines are located.

SAC decided to stop leasing the Hawk Shop space to the bookstore, he said, because the college needs more recreational area.

Students will be able to play table games, display as well as sell photographs and artwork and hold club meetings in this new recreation room, said Gauci. SAC will also provide a bookstand.

The new location of the Hawk Shop will be handy for students using the athletic facilities, said Gauci. The Hawk Shop may also be used as a waiting area for students catching Humber buses.

Bookstore assistant manager Blair Boulanger said the exact moving date is still to be decided.

Campaign to highlight student issues

by Cathy Clarke

Last year's post card campaign aimed at getting students out of the dark and involved in student issues is being reignited said Student Association Council (SAC) President Joe Gauci.

The familiar mushroom posters urging students to get involved and sign their postcards should soon decorate the walls of Humber.

Gauci said student signatures will support four major issues. A voice on the Board of Governors, transferability of credits between schools, Special Occasion Liquor Permits and a look into hidden fees for equipment and supplies faced by students.

SAC wants to collect all signatures before the Provincial Legislature opens its fall session.

CAPS books three bands

by Norman Wagenaar

Three great bands have been booked into CAPS for the first six weeks of school by the Student Association Council (SAC).

On Sept. 24, the Downchild Blues Band will play their own unique style of rhythm and blue.. Jackson Hawk, a top 40 pop band, comes to CAPS on the first of October.

A week later, on October 8, the sound and spirit of the Rolling Stones will fill the air as CAPS presents Rolling Stones night.

Mick Jagger won't be there but you can listen to his music for free.

There'll be a change of pace the next week, Oct. 15, as Andy Brumauer and his polka band celebrate Oktoberfest.

CAPS will open its doors at 6 p.m. on pub nights. A SAC spokesman couldn't say what the cover charge will be for live bands because band prices have increased on average about 20 per cent.

SIN not, says Uba

Students entering Humber College for the first time will no longer be required to give their Social Insurance Number (SIN) to complete their registration, according to Louise Uba, director of Records and Scheduling.

She adds that the Ministry of Colleges and Universities has directed students no longer be required to use their Social Insurance Number as a student identification number. As a result, the college has introduced the Humber Student Number.

Humber now offers a weekend radio course for those who can't do a regular full-time program.

Full-time workers offered weekend radio course

by Savka Banjac

Humber College now offers a weekend Radio Broadcasting program for those interested in radio but unable to quit their jobs and attend full-time classes, according to Stan Larke, Radio-Broadcasting co-ordinator.

The 3-year program, which started this month, already has 34 students, Larke said.

Students attend classes every weekend — Friday through Sunday — for 20 hours. The course lasts 10 months from Sept. to June, he said.

Larke added the students learn core subjects first, then political science and English.

"Weekend students study the same things as day students," Larke said.

Of the 34 students in the program, 10 have previously taken courses in Radio Broadcasting.

giving them advance standing, he said.

Larke added other students in the program have some connection with broadcasting, but will take the course to refresh and update themselves.

"Most of them are mature students," said Larke, citing as example a nurse who opened a poodle grooming shop to allow her to take the course.

Two new instructors were hired to teach the weekend students. Ron Knight, from CHAY-FM and Elaine McDonald from CHUM-FM. Two instructors from the weekday program also teach the weekend students.

With added promotion, Larke expects more students will enrol in the program next year.

"I think it's a success," he said, "it's the best thing we've ever done."

Many vacancies

Job finders kept busy

by Anne-Marie Demore

While everyone was out on summer vacations relaxing in the sun, those who worked in Humber's Placement Centre could only dream about it.

"We had a lot of summer activity," said Martha Casson, director of Placement.

In May and early June many students were looking for jobs, by the end of June the number of job seekers was down.

"I assume a significant number found employment," said Casson. Placement worked with Humber's 1981 graduates to find jobs. "Job notices just poured in," she said, "in all areas such as health sciences, creative arts, business and technology."

Almost 100 per cent of the technology graduates have found jobs in related fields.

"We're further ahead with students finding jobs than at the same time last year," said Casson.

Of the 1979-80 graduates approximately 91 per cent found jobs in their related fields, up a few percentage points from the previous year.

The statistics for the number of 1980-81 graduates who found jobs in their fields will not be available until November 15. This gives graduates who took the summer off a chance to find a job and be included in the report which goes to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, explained Casson.

This year more part-time jobs are also available for students. "The employers are anxious," said Casson.

Casson's advice to students wanting jobs is first make sure of our timetable to avoid a conflict of interest. Know if you want a job because of finances and/or experience.

"Positions that involve both finances and career go quickly," she said, "so start looking now."

The job listings are located outside the Placement Centre in the Gordon Wragg Centre.

During the summer, plans for the opening of the Keelesdale Campus' Placement Centre were finalized. It opens September 15.

Keelesdale, located on Industry Rd. in Weston, offers business-commerce and English courses.

More cash possible

by Rose Jansen and Jackie Steffler

Humber College students awaiting financial assistance from the Ontario Student Assistance Program (OSAP) may receive more money than they had anticipated.

Mary McCarthy, head of the Financial Aids Department at Humber's North Campus, said money allocated to the program has increased by more than 10 per cent this year. Most students, she said, will receive their money within a month.

She added some applications were held up because of the postal strike and the Financial Aids Department is "working through the backlog."

Though the Federal Government is proposing a $1.5 billion cutback in social services, such as education, McCarthy says the cutback "has nothing to do with the assistance program." She said "the cutbacks will probably only affect operational grants."

Coke-Pepsi war blazes

The Coke-Pepsi battle rages on at Humber.

The Student Association Council (SAC), taking the side of Coca-Cola, continues to offer Coke for 35 cents a can in CAPS and the games room, while Pepsi-Cola sells for 40 cents a can throughout the rest of the college.

SAC only makes five or six cents profit per can, according to Margaret Hobbs, SAC's Facility Manager, while the college makes 11 or 12 cents profit on Pepsi.

The price is less "mainly because it's a service to the student body," said Hobbs. SAC, however, can't guarantee the price won't be raised to 40 cents because Coke's wholesale price may increase this year.

"If it costs SAC money (to sell Coke at 35 cents a can) it won't be continued," she warns.

SAC will review prices of pop and food served in CAPS at the beginning of September.

Humber to field varsity soccer team

by Wayne Karl

Humber College will try again this year to field a varsity soccer team, after an unsuccessful attempt four years ago.

Peter Maybury, director of intramural athletics, anticipates no problem establishing a team this year.

"The problem we had four years ago was that the kids were involved in team sports outside the school, and the schedules conflicted," he said. "But we have 25 to 30 players out after only one day of registration and we expect the number to increase with each tryout, so there should be no problem with the players this year."

Maybury said he expects the team to do well in competition against other schools.

"Look at all the players we will have to choose from," he said. "I think we will finish somewhere in the middle. Who knows, we may even win."

Team coach Tony Ciamarra said it's too early to tell just how good the team will be.

"I was pleasantly surprised at the turnout on the first day. There seems to be some good players out there, but there may be a lot of other good players who can't come out because of their classes. It's difficult at this point to say what the team will look like," he said.

"A lot of students still don't know that the team exists so we've got to get their attention. We need more people coming out for practice and we're going to need lots of fan support or soccer at Humber will bomb."

Intramurals provide team spirit

by Tony Poland

If you are sick of watching lost causes like the agonizing Argos, the lacklustre Leafs and the blundering Blue Jays and you think you are a better sport, Humber's athletic department has a league for you.

It's the intramural league and the registration drive is now on for flag football and co-ed volleyball. Next month you can join a team of your choice in sports from hockey; indoor soccer to basketball.

The athletic department offers five fall league sports and five fall tournaments to encourage all the arm-chair jocks out of the pub and onto the field.

Intramural director Peter Maybury expects the football league to field 18 to 20 teams and he predicts the volleyball league will attract 30 to 40 teams.

More activities include a putt-putt tournament for anyone interested in mini-golf. The championship mini-course will be housed in the bubble and includes nine holes of thrill-packed fun. Maybury said the date of the tournament will be announced later.

Benefits plan aids students

by Helen Mancuso

With tuition fees going up, inflation soaring and book prices increasing, full-time Humber students will be relieved to know they are entitled to anywhere from $25 to $2000 in case of accidental death or injury.

In a brochure entitled "Accident and Sickness Plan," SAC (Students Association Council) outlines the benefits available to full-time Humber students.

If you suffer damage to your natural teeth, or need treatment by a licenced masseur, you're in luck. But be forewarned, if you are injured as a result of war, or if you sustain a hernia, you are not covered by the plan and will not be reimbursed.
