

Teacher study not published

by Dave Silburt

Complete results of last year's study on teacher stress at Humber College will not be released because some faculty, who answered the questionnaire anonymously, do not want the results disclosed, according to Business Division instructor Anne Harper.

Harper, who has a background in industrial psychology, distributed 250 questionnaires last January to teachers in all divisions as part of a study on the causes of stress which leads to the phenomenon called "teacher burnout."

The study was done as part of Harper's professional development project, something all teachers must do to obtain a permanent contract. She said she chose teacher stress because it was a topic of current interest.

In a memorandum distributed to faculty in May, Harper said, "the main problem areas were aspects of students, and interactions with administration," but did not elaborate.

The memo suggested all data be released for publication unless some of the respondents disagreed. Harper said a few have since told her the results should not be made public.

Results withheld

She said the teachers did not indicate why the full results should be withheld, nor was any reason apparent in the synopsis of results included with Harper's memo.

Of the 250 questionnaires distributed, more than 40 per cent were filled out and returned.

Questions on the survey included the teachers' age, sex, class size, number of years of teaching experience, and educational backgrounds.

The questionnaires also asked teachers how they perceive their working conditions in the classroom and with administration.

Although some of the raw data were included with Harper's memo to the teachers, her full analysis of the study's results has not been released.

According to a copy of Harper's memo obtained by Coven, about 50 per cent of the teachers were only "somewhat bothered", to varying degrees, by lack of student interest in subject matter, whereas over 42 per cent were "not bothered at all," and only about eight per cent were "very bothered."

Lack of maturity among students was not a source of stress to about 26 per cent, while 62 per cent were only "somewhat bothered." Only slightly less than 12 per cent were "very bothered" by it.

The majority of the 104 responding teachers, approximately 74 per cent, claimed they were "not bothered at all" by their students' evaluation of them; only about three per cent admitted to being "very bothered."

A large fraction of the teachers, over 42 per cent, felt they were usually treated as professionals by administration, and about 18 per cent felt they were always treated as such.

The uncertainty of labor negotiations only sometimes bothered 40 per cent of the respondents, but over 15 per cent were always bothered by it.

When asked if they are "bothered by the fact (they) are affiliated to a union," about 33 per cent of the teachers said never, almost 38 per cent said sometimes, and less than four per cent said they are "mostly" bothered by the presence of the Union. Twenty-five per cent admitted they were "always" bothered by their union affiliation.

Back to basics

Most teachers agreed more attention should be paid to the basics in the school system—"the three R's." Over 34 per cent agreed and over 60 per cent agreed strongly.

But the information in the memo cannot be properly interpreted by the layman, said Harper.

"You have to treat this sort of stuff with restraint," she said. The results can only indicate possible areas of study, she added, rather than providing definite prescriptions.

Harper said faculty members are welcome to see a copy of the full report.

Classes may end in October

For the first time in the history of Humber's support staff union, local 563 appears to have made a contract settlement with the Council of Regents (COR) before their old contract expired.

"Our contract ran out September 1 and management came out with their offer August 31, which is cutting it rather thin," said Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU), local 563 treasurer, Don Stevens.

Not official

The contract, however, is not yet official.

"Although the negotiating team will recommend our members accept the contract it's still up to their okay," Stevens said.

The ratification meeting is scheduled for September 14 and at press time no details of the contract had been released.

"It looks like a good year," Stevens said, "it's nice to know what you're going to be paid before you begin to work."

Stevens couldn't release contract details but it's likely the contract will cover one year and include a straight wage hike along with a percentage increase.

Strike threat

While the threat of support staff striking and closing Humber is remote, there is still the possibility of a strike by faculty, members of OPSEU local 562, who, at press time, are still negotiating with the government.

"Our negotiations are in a crucial phase," said local 562 President Gary Begg, "we've been negotiating continuously since mid-August."

OPSEU demands include a workload reduction, wage increase—both across the board and a percentage increase—improved benefits, notably the dental plan and vacation parity for librarians and counsellors.

Begg said the union is already organized if strike action is necessary. Strike headquarters and a strikefund have been readied.

Task force formed

by Nancy Pack

A three-man academic committee will study the feasibility of offering short-term, Humber College programs in York Borough.

The sub-committee of the President's Executive Council, comprised of Larry Holmes, dean of Creative and Communication Arts, Angus King, dean of Academic and Commercial Studies, and Ron Hook, dean of Applied Arts and Technology, was established following a Humber College study on the post-secondary educational needs in York.

That study recommended that short, post-secondary programs be established in the borough from the Business and Applied Arts division, ranging from about one to two years in length. Programs in these divisions, the researchers noted, were the borough residents' main areas of interest in post-secondary education.

Although there are two Humber College Campuses in York, the York-Eglinton Centre (YEC) and the Keeleisdale Campus, neither offers post-secondary education. YEC offers English as a Second Language programs designed to help new Canadians learn English and the Keeleisdale Campus is geared toward Manpower training courses.

In addition to the proposed program changes, the researchers also studied the possibility of building a

Two services available to students

Having trouble telling a gerund from a regular verb? Can't afford the $35 the Bookstore wants for a new text? Relax, it's possible SAC can help.

Student Association Council (SAC) President, Joe Gauci announced two new services for students last week. A program to unite tutors with students needing academic help and a way to unload your used texts and buy quality second-hand books.

"SAC's tutorial program was developed with help from the Professional Development Centre and Counselling," Gauci said.

"The process is very simple," he added, "Prospective tutors will be students recommended either by their teachers or co-ordinators. They must take a short course developed by Pro Dev and Counselling to qualify as a tutor."

SAC will register each tutor and when a student needs help SAC will supply a tutor's name. It's up to the students to contact the tutor, Gauci said.

"SAC is merely acting as a contact between tutors and students rather than a tutorial service," he added, "we want to keep it informal."

Tutors will be paid by the students, $4 per hour for one person and $6 per hour for groups no larger than 5 people.

The program should begin the first day of school, "although that's optimistic," Gauci said.

SAC's Used Book Service offers students a chance to sell last year's text books and buy second-hand books for this year.

"Students with texts to sell bring them to us in the SAC office," Gauci said, "They leave the books, set a price and if the texts sell SAC contacts them."

"Anyone needing books can come down and look over our supply," Gauci said.

"The only thing we stipulate is if a person leaves a book and it's ripped or stolen SAC is not responsible," said Gauci.

SAC isn't charging for this service yet, but Gauci said they might institute a small charge, perhaps 25 cents per book.

College will get $465,000 grant

by Doug Devine

Humber College will receive a $465,000 grant under the provincial government's BILD program, according to an announcement made by Bette Stephenson, minister of education, at the president's breakfast last week.

Humber applied for the grant last year and Vice President Academic Tom Norton said the money will be used to purchase new data processing equipment and a new micro-processor for the technology division. Norton said the administration had taken a chance and counted on the grant when they accepted an additional 40 students into the technology department this year.

"This grant is a tremendous compliment to Humber," said Norton. "It recognizes the work we've done in that area and gives us a really bright future for our electronics courses."

new campus in York. Early hopes that York would get the go-ahead on a new campus facility were dashed by a statement in the report.

"While the potential growth and participation at York's Humber College campuses are real, it is not so great that the college should consider building a new campus facility," the report read.

However, the study concluded the most feasible solution to the lack of Humber College space in York would be to find a secondary school whose enrolment is declining. This building could be bought or rented by the college.

Humber's Board of Governors will also look at the possibility of selling the Keele Dale Campus in a move to combine all York's Humber College area into one facility. PEC says the move will increase the college's visibility in York. With every program in one building, there would be no need for the Keele Dale campus, already seen as a growing liability to the college. They stressed, however, that the possible sale of Keele Dale Campus must first be discussed with the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

The academic sub-committee is expected to report its findings to the Board of Governors by October, 1981.

Student paper goes twice weekly

Read all about it

by Nancy Beasley

Have we got news for you—now twice a week! Coven, Humber College's student newspaper, will publish twice weekly beginning Sept. 14.

Publisher and Journalism coordinator James Smith said a second edition on Thursday each week will allow journalism students more practical experience and provide the college with more space for its news.

"With the growth of Humber, there is enough news and feature material to go twice a week," Smith said.

Although publishing costs will double, Smith said he expects to cover the added cost with increased revenue from more advertising.

"In the last two years there has been a 10 to 12 per cent increase in advertising revenue and it's going up steadily," he said.

He said increased enrolment in Humber's journalism program has provided enough students to write stories for two papers.

"It's our hope that we will one day have a daily paper similar to other large journalism schools so students get the experience of working on a daily."

SU is improving image

by Tim Gall

The Lakeshore Student Union plans to create a high profile image this year, according to SU advisor Pat Stocks, and efforts to reach that goal begin tomorrow with the onslaught of Orientation '81

"It will be absolutely great," she says, noting events for the week include a patio barbecue, a best legs contest, sandwich cinema, and an "Orientation Bash with the Grotty Beats."

With a theme of, "Watch out we're growing", the SU is confident Orientation Week will be a success and students will become involved, said Stocks. The festivities, which have been in the planning stages since early summer, will run from Sept. 9 until Sept. 12.

According to Stocks, new SU President Pam Hurdle is enthusiastic and expects the entire SU crew to work well together. Stocks said this will be a major benefit for the councils plans to boost its image.

Not only will SU become popular with the students, but also with the community, she said. "We're going to create a wholesome, good attitude in the entire Lakeshore area," Stocks added.

The advisor also insists SU will encourage involvement at LS 2 with the introduction of pub nights periodically.

Other activities planned for the Lakeshore campuses this year include lunch-time lectures and seminars. The seminars will deal with social issues such as rape, crime, fire prevention, vandalism, day care, and lifeskills. The SU will operate blood donor clinics again this year, she noted.

"It's all very, very exciting," concluded Stocks.

Welcome Back!

Well gang, welcome back. Another year, another $440 for tuition. Mind you, the increase is not that overwhelming.

Yes, the cost of education, like every other supposed luxury in life, has gone up. But the increase — a $20 per semester difference — is a mere 10 per cent.

The "incidental fee", the vague addition to your required fees, which translates as an activity fee, has gone up $5 — a 20 per cent hike.

Parking has increased about five per cent, again not enough to cry about.

So, all in all, Humber's big guns are being fair to the students. But, Uncle Bill, our ever-popular provincial leader, has arbitrarily chosen to cut back provincial grants for students.

And it gets worse. The Feds are planning a $1.5 billion cutback in social services spending. Believe it or not, your education is considered a social service.

The bulk of funding will then shift to the province and Uncle Bill is sure to pass at least part of the buck to you, the poor starving student.

So guys, be prepared. If you got upset about a measly $20 per semester fee hike this year I hope you're graduating in '82. If you've got another year after this you'll probably have to pay even more through the nose.

Ah, welcome back!

Union & management: a plea for sanity

Once again, students enter the hallowed halls of Humber, and though the possibility of a teacher's strike does not seem imminent, the strike noises made recently by faculty, support staff and management, remind us once again of the absurdity of Canadian labor relations.

The adversary roles played by unions and governments in this country make a battlefield of any public service, playing havoc with the lives of innocents.

Each side of a labor confrontation has rules they play by. Unions of late have fallen into the habit of making absurdly inflated demands so they can allow themselves to be whittled down to a reasonable offer. They often appear willing to inconvenience or bankrupt any non-combatant to press their demands.

On the government sides, there seems to be an unspoken rule that no concession, however small, shall ever be made to any union without the bitterest of battles. The idea appears to be to villify the unions by goading them into a strike, and marshalling public opinion against them.

So the public domain becomes ever and always a battleground.

Both unions and management (whose combined numbers total in the low thousands) have too much power if they can shut down the college system, jeopardizing the future for tens of thousands of students.

There must be a better way. Students and the public are weary of negotiation by confrontation.

Perhaps we can study and learn from the Japanese and West German labor-management scene where the rule is negotiation by compromise and not confrontation.

COVEN, an independent college newspaper, is produced twice-weekly by the students of the Journalism Department.

SAC will work for you

There is much to do, and little time to do it.

This matter adequately describes the position of you, the Students Association and me, your president. We will be faced with a multitude of problems; problems which we can overcome, which we must overcome. We will also be faced with many good experiences, meeting new people—trying new things—keeping in touch with old friends.

I am not going to bring cries of despair to what is a new beginning; rather I am, at least I am attempting to prepare you for what may happen. There is little we, you and I, can not do. We are a community of some 8,000 people, and we will not be held back. My hope is that you will support our attempts to both entertain and represent you.

On behalf of the Students Association Council (SAC), I welcome you to Humber, and wish you personal success in your academic and social life. I hope we can work to help make this year Humber's most exciting ever.

Your friend,
Joseph S. Gauci,
SAC President

Speak Easy

by David Silburt

Well, here we all are. The vague, misty, and distant September we didn't have to do anything until, is here.

If you're like most students, you approach the back-to-school scene with ambivalence. (As you are no doubt aware, "ambivalence" is defined as the feeling you get watching your mother-in-law drive over a cliff in YOUR new car.)

With the arrival of September there's good news and bad news. The good news is, you're back among friends taking yet another major step toward your career goals.

The bad news is, you gotta go back to class. How bad or good this change seems depends, to a great extent, on how you spent your summer "vacation."

Some of us were fortunate enough to spend our vacations working at our chosen vocations as student help.

Plunging from the real world back into the semi-artificiality of school can be tough. On the other hand, if you spent the summer pumping gas, it may be a distinct relief to hit the books anew.

But whether coming back to school seems a step up or a step down, it's something each of us must do. Otherwise, like the song says, we could "wind up workin' in a gas station." (My apologies to those studying gasoline-pump management at Humber.)

The only way to lick the back-to-school blues is to think positively. If you interned during the summer, think how much closer you are to making a living at your chosen career. If you worked at a distasteful, boring job just to make money, thank your lucky stars you won't have to do it for a living, and buckle down to work.

If you spent your summer living and working away from home and hearth, think how nice it is to get back to civilization.

But if you were home with the folks all summer, you've probably had a bellyfull of that, and are ready to savor your independence all over again.

So it's up to you, Humberites. You can psyche yourselves up for another frontal assault on the forboding ramparts of Academia, or you can mope and complain, and bemoan your fate.

If you're mature and intelligent, you'll compose yourself, and approach the coming school term with good spirits and enthusiasm.

Gaze resolutely ahead through ice-clear eyes, set your jaw firmly and stride with confidence down these hallowed halls. That's right. Think positively.

Oh, by the way, there's one more thing: HAAAAAAAAALP!!!

President welcomes students

You are to be commended on your good judgment in choosing a community college to further your education, and especially so since you chose Humber.

In this time of rapid inflation our most important defence against the ravages of inflation is to acquire knowledge and skill needed in present day society. To enhance your earning power as well as to contribute to your growth as an individual is part of the purpose of the college.

In spite of ourselves, we like to cultivate qualities of a warm supportive family. You can help by participating in a wide variety of activities that occur.

Welcome to the ever-growing group of Humber College people. We wish you every success in your program and hope to share in the excitement of your successes during the coming year.

Sincerely,
Gordon Wragg

Since once I sat upon a promontory,

That the rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certastars shot madly from their spheres

To hear the sea-maid's music.

Shakespearean plays were not in the repertoire of the York Community Theatre group this summer, but the plays performed, on more than just mid-summer nights, entertained both young and old throughout the Borough of York.

Compiled mainly of Humber College Theatre students or graduates, the troupe gave several performances of three separate plays, each geared to a different age group.

Gerald Smith, an advisor to the Learning Enrichment Foundation in the borough said he came up with the idea of using a theatre group to give school children a chance to experience theatre, while learning at the same time.

Salaries paid

He said the York Community Theatre group applied to three different agencies for funding, receiving money from two. The Summer Work Experience Program, funded by the Federal government, paid the 10 student's salaries, while the Youth Theatre Training Program of Theatre Ontario paid for the group's professional director, Gerry Pearson.

Pearson, a former full-time instructor at Humber, directed the group, as well as working on set and costume designs, according to Smith.

So what does a summer theatre travelling group perform?

Throughout May and June the troupe travelled to York Borough public schools, performing Tangleflags, a play geared to children in grades 3, 4, and 5.

"The kids loved it," Smith said. "During the opening sequence Gerry had the kids design their own dream house on a piece of newsprint and the pictures were tacked on the set and left throughout the scene."

Smith said not only was exposure to theatre beneficial to the children, it was also beneficial to the young performers.

"Performing before a live child-audience is different. If a six- or eight-year-old is bored they let you know.

"If they like what you're doing they get involved."

"The actors were a little stunned because nobody laughed."

The second play, featuring a multi-cultural theme, was also performed before young audiences.

"It was called Story Theatre," Smith said, "and contained a series of short, classic stories based on folk legend.

"It gave the audience a chance to share experience because the groups have a multi-cultural mix.

The Learning Enrichment Foundation advisor said the folk stories included tales of East Indians, West Indians, Canadian Indians, and Eskimos.

"The idea is to try to shape the children's experience in terms of multi-ethnicity."

In addition to performing for children, the actors also played to audiences more advanced in years — primarily those in nursing and retirement homes in the area.

The play performed, Toronto 1900-1904, was a musical hall show, including song, dance, and acting.

"It was aimed at senior citizens," Smith explained, "And they (York Community Theatre) chose that time period because the seniors were young back then."

"The audience frequently joined in especially since the groups provided song sheets."

He said the over-sixties crowd reacted differently than a regular theatre audience would.

"The actors were a little stunned because nobody laughed and there wasn't thunderous applause. But after the show a lady came up to one of the group and said a woman who had been at the home for 30 years had never smiled but she had smiled today."

The show was billed as a party for senior citizens and it was just that, Smith said.

It appears the audiences were treated to good entertainment, but what did the student actors get out of the work experience program?

"I think it was a good experience for them," Smith said. "As a travelling company, 10 people living inside each others pocket does create some tensions.

New experience

"But the people involved are a lot older, wiser, and more experienced."

He said although a summer theatre group out of the college is not a new experience for students, this summer's group had help from the college.

"Humber gave the group space to rehearse in and the college was reimbursed for any material the group used," Smith explained.

Although the students were paid minimum wage for their work — nine of the actors were paid $132 per week and the student program coordinator received $195 per week — Smith said the experience they gained is invaluable.

"And they had a lot of fun."

New game is coming

Gunfire, violence, death and KAOS

by Tim Gall

The halls of Humber may soon be filled with gunfire, violence, death and KAOS.

KAOS (Killing As Organized Sport), is North America's fastest growing student game. A game which Students Association Council (SAC) President Joe Gauci is anxious to have started at Humber.

Gauci, who has been looking into the game since he was elected last year, said he has left its formation up to technology students who showed an interest in the game last year.

Apparently four technology students had been playing the game—which has spread like wildfire since its inception—without the college's knowledge. They are anxious to form a KAOS organization here, Gauci said.

KAOS was originally formed in 1976 by Richard Baltin, a law student at the University of Florida. It is actually a spin-off of Killer, a favorite University dorm diversion since 1960.

"Playing Killer can keep people out of trouble," Baltin says. "If they weren't playing Killer, they could be taking drugs or robbing a 7-Eleven."

The game is usually played with plastic dart guns by a number of students who are both the hunter and the hunted. Each "assassin", as they are usually called, is supplied with a photo, biographical data and other relevant information. The winner is either the student who collects the most number of "kills", or is the last "living" member of the game.

The technology students have been known to use plastic knives in their KAOS activities. The students, who like good "spies" did not reveal their names, also said "hit cards" are used to record the number of kills each assassin makes during a specified period of time.

Different forms

Different forms of the game are popular throughout the United States, and Canada—at the University of Alberta, and the University of Calgary.

At the University of Western Ontario the student council won't endorse the game.

"The concept of the game is inappropriate for a university community," according to Jeff Singer, the school's student president last year. Singer does admit the "murderous game is all the rage and is spreading like wild-fire."

Last year the St. George campus of the University of Toronto erupted into KAOS as more than 100 students participated in the sport.

Spies at the U of T campus have been known to disguise themselves, or call their victims for dates and "blow them away" at the most intimate of moments.

"It's the victory of brains over brawn," said Kevin Hebner, a U of T player. "It's not a game, it's a way of life," he said.

KAOS has recorded killings in daylight, in the dead of the night, in the middle of a storm, and, even during sex.

Although some Humber officials expressed concern over the sport last year, Gauci is still anxious to make Humber the next post-secondary institution to kill time the KAOS way. But the technology students will have some competition in meeting Gauci's aim, because McMaster University students in Hamilton are interested in starting the game. They too tried last year, but met with opposition from school officials, and expect the same this year.

Registration fee

Although Gauci will not have anything to do with the organization of the game at Humber, he said he expects a registration fee will be required. A similar fee was paid by 250 University of Calgary students who played the game last fall. They were shooting up the halls in an attempt to win a collection of James Bond stories. Prizes will probably be awarded to Humber assassins as well.

Gauci also indicated a games club will be set up this year by SAC and anyone interested in joining, or wishing more information should contact SAC officials.

Scenes like this could become a common occurrence in the halls of Humber if KAOS erupts at Humber. Here, Sue Legue chokes Chris Ballard into submission.

Are you tired of being just another face in the crowd?

Having trouble getting dates?

Wish you were popular?

Well, you're in luck!

You too could become a member of that infamous, jet-setting crowd on the Student Association. Meet new people and discover the world of SAC.

You may even end up in People magazine, and your sure to gain high friends in some places.

If you would like to get involved in the running of SAC and think you could represent your division in a responsible manner, come down to the SAC office in the Gordon Wragg Student Centre and pick up a nomination form. (No power trippers please9.

Medieval club to open

by Tony Poland

Gallantry and knighthood may be making a comeback at Humber thanks to students at the Equine Centre.

If you would like to meet some comely wenches or your knight in shining armour and feast on much more than Big Macs, there's a club you should know about.

The new group will be a chapter of the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA) and will offer you the chance to mount your steed and visit medieval times.

The club, which operates in both North America and Europe, allows those interested in medieval lifestyle to become a part of that period, through costumes, crafts, and even combat.

Yes, you can don your armour and whip the black knight into submission with a wooden club.

Of course, the fighting is controlled and it is safe, ensures Charles Arnold the Equine Secretary who is trying to start the Humber chapter of the SCA.

"The worst that has happened in 16 years is a broken elbow," Arnold said.

The society will be funded by Students Association Council (SAC) if Arnold can get 10 full-time students to join.

The society can technically run with five members but Arnold said he won't consider a club of less than 10 people.

However, he said there is no deadline and membership will be accepted anytime.

Would-be knights and damsels will be attracted by costumes, contests, and feasts. The costumes will not be expensive because they will be designed and made by the person wearing them.

For those thirsty for combat, there is a Baron who will help build your armour.

"Anyone interested in gaining skills from the period should join," said Arnold.

"We want to make people aware and tell them we are not a bunch of fruitcakes. Just because we dress funny, they shouldn't be afraid to talk to us.

So if your imagination is boundless and you think you would like to become a rescued damsel or battle a knight on the field of honor, drop by the concourse this Thursday night (Sept. 10) from 7-10 to look at displays and listen to medieval music.

Gadzooks, where's my lance, I see a dragon!

Golf management course in rough

by Tony Poland

The Golf Management Program, the brainchild of Business Chairman Bev Walden, hit a snag in its early stages as Walden failed to get the cooperation of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association (CPGA).

Walden said the program would be delayed another two to three weeks until he could get together with the CPGA. The program might not come about as Walden himself is unsure of its future.

"Who knows, maybe in three weeks I'll be out of business," he said.

Meanwhile, back at the greens, the business division plans its eleventh annual invitational golf tournament.

Seventy-five golfers are expected to tee-off at Cedarhurst Golf Club, Sun., Sept. 20. For $12 golfers receive green fees, lunch, and, if they are lucky enough to win, prizes.

Newspaper discount

The Globe and Mail, Canada's Toronto-based National Newspaper, is offering avid student readers home delivery for half price, Coven learned last week.

Mike Paxton, of the Globe's cir-ulation department said the half price deal (32 weeks for $32) is available to college and university students. All that is required is the campus name and a student identification number.

In memory of Mollie McMurrich

by Dave Silburt

Humber College lost one of its own this summer, when Mollie McMurrich, the amiable, cigar-puffing Fine Arts teacher, died of cancer. She was 57.

Mollie McMurrich

McMurrich, who joined Humber College in September, 1970 as an instructor of art history, became a Fine Arts program co-ordinator in subsequent years.

Kay Kelly, divisional services co-ordinator for the Creative and Communication Arts (CCA) division said she was dearly loved by all who knew her.

"I'm sorry we lost her, but I'm so glad we got the chance to know her."

Cancer spread

Dave Chesterton, co-ordinator of Packaging Design, said last summer McMurrich underwent a mastectomy as a result of breast cancer, and later check-ups showed her free of the disease. But earlier this summer doctors found the cancer had spread.

She died August 7, barely a month after her July 3 birthday.

"Those of us who saw her up to the last few days found she was still talking about helping...to choose her own successor," said Chesterton.

Memorial fund

"She knew by then she wasn't going to survive."

But she will be memorialized by a scholarship in her name, said Chesterton, who is chairman of the memorial fund.

The memorial would be an award or scholarship in art history, such that any student taking art history in any program would have a chance to compete, said Chesterton.

Raise money

"What we would like to do is raise three or four thousand dollars to put in trust."

Because Mollie's husband, Norm McMurrich, is an architectural consultant, Chesterton intends to approach architectural firms who know McMurrich, and ask if they would like to contribute to the memorial fund. He thinks they will.

He also said Humber College alumni will be contacted, along with students and staff who knew Mollie.

"She was really popular with a helluva lot of people."

Although a memorial service is a possibility, Norm McMurrich said nothing has been planned as yet.

Breakfast bash a success

by Chris Ballard

When Dr. Bette Stephenson arrived at the President's Breakfast last Wednesday she brought her own tantalizing morsel for Humber to digest—$465,000 to cover the cost of new computer equipment and increased enrolment in the technology division.

Not that the Minister of Colleges and Universities didn't enjoy Humber's breakfast fare of scrambled eggs and sausages it's just that she's "pleased with Humber's advances to open education in this area," she explained.

Dr. Stephenson showered Humber's staff with a multitude of verbal pats on the back praising the quality of college life and programs.

Five hundred pounds of scrambled eggs and 350 pounds of sausages later it was all over, the sing-along and 10-year pin presentations a thing of the past. All that remained were the voices of 1,100 diners as they filed out of the gymnasium and the rumble of 1,100 contented stomachs.

NORML wants pot legalized

by Nancy Beasley

To combat "misinformation" and ignorance about the medicinal use of marijuana, a Toronto-based group headed by a former Humber student has launched a fundraising campaign.

To kick it off, the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws in Canada (NORML) will hold a social evening at St. Lawrence Hall, on Front St., Sept. 18.

Ad campaign

NORML's executive director Terry Parker said the event has been organized to help raise money for an advertising campaign.

Parker said the group now supports the decriminalization of marijuana but will change its policy to support total legalization of the drug.

"There are a lot of bizarre reports being published and we would like to tell people about the other side," Parker said. "That's why we want to raise some money."

Parker, an epileptic, said his doctor recommended he use the drug as partial treatment to prevent seizures, but when that recommendation was forwarded to the federal government the request was denied.

"I have to get it illegally," he admitted, adding he knows of several other people who have to do the same, to obtain the drug for medicinal purposes.

OUR HEARTS BLEED. They were here for a year; now no longer around for us to hear; they've packed up and gone their separate ways; nobody cares what he plays. The group itself is dead; each member trying to get ahead; they'll no longer set the stage afire; because they've had to retire. But the group we'll always remember; because the FRIENDS OF BOB will love forever.

Cine course gets boost thanks to Conestoga

by Steve Pecar

Conestoga's loss is Humber's gain as up to 35 students, a former co-ordinator, and $500,000 worth of film and production equipment have been added to Humber's cinematography program this year.

The increases have come as a result of Humber taking in the remaining second and third year students from the cancelled film program at Kitchener's Conestoga College.

Patrick Kearney, Humber's co-ordinator of Film and Television Production, said he expects all 35 students affected by the cancellation of the Conestoga course to make the move to Humber.

"The film program there (Conestoga) was phased out and it was felt the program at Humber was best suited for them to enlist and be integrated into," said Kearney.

While the second year students will be absorbed into the Humber program, the third year students will complete their curriculum with the help of their former film co-ordinator Bob Bocking who was hired at the college when the Conestoga course was cut.

"We are very happy to have Bob join our staff," said Kearney, who has come to know Bocking over the years. "He is a very well known cinematographer and teacher, and will be a great asset to the course."

Creative and Communication Arts Dean Larry Holmes echoed Kearney's praise. He said the addition of Bocking to the staff is "one of the biggest things that has happened to us."

One other area the cinematography course will benefit from is equipment which will be sent from Conestoga to Humber.

According to Dean Holmes, the college will receive $500,000 to $750,000 worth of production equipment from Conestoga.

New teachers in the wings

As the curtain goes up on this school year, four new teachers will be in the limelight of Humber's theatre department.

"Two years ago, Gregson Winkfield left the college, at the end of the summer I was short-staffed so I hired several part-timers to fill in," said Gerry Smith, Theatre Arts co-ordinator.

Bill Davis, director of last year's production of Can You See Me Yet? joins the full-time staff after having taught one semester last year.

Davis is the Co-Founder of Festival Lennoxville in Quebec and has extensive background in both radio and live theatre.

Gerry Pearson, has returned to professional freelance work, but will teach part-time. Pearson will direct a Humber Theatre television production.

"We tended to do just two main stage shows but what we're trying to do is run a studio production and we'll try and produce it fully," Pearson said. He expects the polished television production to be about one-half hour long.

Among the other new thespian coaches are Doug Buchanan who will know officially as a technical director, but will also teach students the principles of sound and lighting.

Maxine Graham, a set designer for Stratford in both England and Canada and a designer at Halifax's Neptune Theatre, will teach set design.

B.J. Reed-Aitken will finish her run at Pars Cabaret with her trio and step into a position at Humber to teach model making and costuming.

Smith is excited about the new additions to the theatre department's staff. "Since we're the best we want only the best and that's what we're getting this year," he said.
