Costs reduced $5000

SAC cuts losses on handbook

by Bruce Corcoran

If the student council's effort on the annual "Student Survival Guide" is any indication, this year's SAC is trying to reduce costs and avoid excessive spending, something that plagued last year's council.

Although the bill is not yet back from the printer with exact figures, SAC has apparently cut its losses on the handbook by over $4,000 compared to last year, according to Michelle Willis, SAC vice-president.

"The book lost $11,000 its first year (1985), $7,000 last year, and we've cut our losses to a mere $2,000 and some change this year," Willis said.

The book is a student guide to the college, with the layout of the entire school, information on SAC and other student services, a calendar of activities, and a notebook all rolled into one.

A number of problems hindered the book's organizers at first, according to Jim Purdie, SAC president.

"The bad reputation from last year really hampered advertising space sales. Clients were discouraged because the book wasn't ready on time," Purdie said.

In 1986, the book was supposed to be released in early September, but it didn't come out until mid-

October. This year's handbook is already available in SAC.

SAC saved most of its money by doing some of the more expensive work themselves, Willis explained.

The binding was changed, further reducing costs. The previous binding was an individual wire loop that had to be put on by hand. This year the book is bound by a spiralling wire, costing 31 cents, 23 cents less than the other binding, but just as durable, according to Willis.

"The 23 cents a book saving doesn't seem like much, until you figure there are 10,000 handbooks," she said.

No-smoking policy

Staff, students told to butt out

by Garnet Barnsdale

No ifs, ands, or butts. As of last week, Humber is smoke-free, except for a few spots in the college.

The Board of Governors, in cooperation with SAC, put its anti-smoking policy into action by declaring most of the college a no smoking zone.

Except for sections in CAPS, The Pipe, 7th Semester and the Private Dining Room, as well as some washrooms, staff and students have been told not to smoke at Humber.

According to SAC president Jim Purdie, the policy will be difficult to enforce.

"They're not going to police it," Purdie said. "Administration is asking everyone to support the policy."

College President Robert Gordon said there are "all kinds of things" that can be done with students who disobey the policy.

"We don't owe them the right to come to the school," he said. "We can withhold their marks. We don't have to graduate them."

For now, the college president said ways of policing the new policy are still being discussed.

"The pressure of people who don't want to smoke will be the key factor," he added. "Now there is a policy that will force them (smokers) to stop."

Purdie said a survey distributed by SAC last year showed that "overwhelmingly, people were in favour of abolishing smoking in the workplace."

Gordon said administration's ultimate goal is to create a total non-smoking environment.

"Right now we're in a transition phase — a phase in for those who desperately need a smoke," he explained. "We have to respect those who smoke and give them the opportunity to do it in a place where it won't harm others."

Both Gordon and Purdie said some washrooms have been designated as smoking areas because they are well-ventilated.

Purdie also said that SAC, despite supporting the policy, wanted to continue to sell cigarettes in CAPS.

That request was shot down by administration.

"I'm upset; we can't win," Purdie said. "They decided we can't do it, so we might as well respect their decision. If we sell cigarettes, they can pull the plug on our license. We have to protect that. It would close our pub down."

According to Purdie, cigarette sales in Caps account for two per cent of gross sales, or $3,000-$4,000.

Fewer parking spots

Construction...chaos

by Teresa Madaleno

Construction work done at the North Campus over the summer may cause headaches instead of relief for students who drive to school.

According to parking information, work done on both the parking lot and the college itself has resulted in a reduction of parking spaces.

"The red lot will be reduced about 250 spaces because of the construction scheduled for the new technology building," Blair Boulanger, head of parking facilities said.

Boulanger also explained that construction at the front of the college, along Humber College Boulevard, created a loss of parking spots. Boulanger explained that a "berm" — a narrow ledge or shoulder — was built creating a rise of land by the sidewalk.

To alleviate the problem, "there will be a temporary parking lot set up in the athletic field," Boulanger said.

Despite the construction, there are more than 2000 parking spaces at the North Campus, not including daily parking, Boulanger pointed out.

Still, not everyone who applies for a permit gets one.

Notices of regret from the bookstore were sent out to students starting August 20th.

Those who did receive a permit paid $68.00 for two semesters or

Put a lid on it! — Workers build towards finishing the new student centre just outside the Pipe.

$36.00 for one semester.

Although the bookstore has tried to be organized with the distribution of parking permits over the years, there are a lot of unsatisfied drivers.

Heather Twinn, a second year business student attended most of her classes near the E section of the college last year, but had a parking permit at the opposite side of the college, outside the L section.

"I don't think it's much to ask for a spot closer to the side of the building where all your classes are," Twinn said.

However, part of the parking policy is to give a person a spot that is closest to where most of their classes are, Boulanger clarified.

"There aren't enough spaces to accommodate everyone, so some students have spots at the opposite side of the college. The problem is we don't know from year to year how many students are really going to be driving," he said.

Students who have received a notice in the mail saying they did not get a parking space can pick up their refund at the bookstore.

New co-ed residence may cost nothing

by Martin Powell

If plans for a new residence at Humber college's North campus are successful, Humber will pay nothing for its construction:

According to Ken Cohen, Physical Resources director, the contractors will be given the Osler residence as payment. The Osler residence has an estimated value in excess of $8,000,000.

Queen's Park will make a decision on the proposal after the provincial election.

The proposed residence will have 360 rooms, 60 rooms more than the Osler residence has now, and will be located north-west of the Gordon Wragg Centre, where the football field is located.

The housing centre will be co-ed and students will no longer have to travel far to attend classes at the North campus.

Margaret Nesbitt, the Osler residence manager is pleased with the tentative plan.

"It will be a wonderful thing for the kids," Nesbitt said.

However, students in search of housing should not get excited now. They will have to wait a few semesters. Jim Purdie, SAC president, said the proposed residence will only get under way in one to one and one-half years.

Welcome to the maze

by Karin Nilsson

"Help! If I don't find room E221 soon I'm going to be late for my first English class and everybody will be there already and STARE at me when I walk in"... "If the washroom isn't behind the next corner"... "How on earth do I get out of this school?"

Every year it's the same. Panic-stricken, the first year students stagger aimlessly around Humber like lost souls, clutching a crumpled map in their sweaty hands.

It's not always easy to be one of almost 3000 freshmen (North campus) at one of Canada's largest colleges, especially not if you are from out of town and everything around you is new, big and confusing.

This year eighty-three per cent — that's right 83 — come from out of town (Grand Bend, Grimsby and London just to mention a few).

To help you find your way around this maze of floors, corridors and stairways to the most important places at Humber (well, at least some of them) we have created this map. So, before you run for the nearest EXIT sign take a good look. Welcome to the maze!

Beer prices stay the same

Caps has $14,000 new look

by Bruce Corcoran

Humber College's north campus pub, Caps, had an expensive facelift between May and September.

By the end of the summer, the bills for the watering hole's renovations totalled over $14,000. About $9,000 of this was paid for out of Caps' profits last year, while the other $5,000 was covered by student council funds.

SAC cleaned house by replacing the eight-year-old wooden chairs with 275 new light-weight plastic ones.

The new chairs also come with a ten year durability guarantee.

The reasons for the change over to the white plastic seats aren't just because of heavy wear and tear, according to SAC president Jim Purdie.

Even at a 55 per-cent discount, the chairs still cost over $7,000 total ($26-$27 each).

Caps also has a new paint job.

The walls have again been re-painted, this time a light blue to match the ceiling. The $2,100 job covers the loud pink, yellow, and white eyesore that smeared the walls last year.

Had the ceiling been painted as well, an additional $4,000 would have been spent.

Last year's student council spent over $5,000 on "speakers, a complete wiring system overhaul, satellite hook-up, and a lot of new equipment," according to Purdie.

Pool table added

The equipment includes a new stereo equalizer, video switcher, a new system to provide stereo sound on the dance floor, security covers for the speakers, as well as numerous other components.

Last year, dart boards were put up, and this year Caps has added a pool table, but removed the video games.

The billiard table wasn't purchased, or rented, but is owned by a vending company which shares the profits with Caps, according to Purdie.

"Everytime a student puts any money in, we (SAC) get 50 per cent, and the New Wave Sales gets the other 50 percent," the first-term SAC president said.

On pub nights, the pool table will be covered and students won't be able to use it.

Beer same price

Even the food menu has been changed slightly, and there has also been a price hike, according to the Facilities Manager, Margaret Hobbs.

"During licenced hours, the menu will include more 'bar-type' food — like chicken wings and chicken fingers," Hobbs said.

"The price increase is nothing to get excited about, maybe a nickel. That's not much consider-

FILE PHOTO

Big changes — Caps is $14,000 different this year. Plastic chairs replace wooden ones, blue paint covers the walls, the music is in stereo on the dance floor, but the beer prices remain the same as last year.

ing prices haven't changed in over two years."

One of the few things that remains the same is the price of bottled beer, and draft by the glass, ($1.95 and $0.95 respectively) even though Purdie was pressured to raise the prices.

"The whole staff wanted prices up. Fifty to 90 per cent of Caps' alcohol revenue is from beer sales, and a price increase would tick a lot of people off, so we kept it where it was," Purdie explained.

Everything else is more expensive, according to Ken Chirico.

Draft jugs are up 65 cents — from $5.85 to $6.50 a jug (eight glass equivalence), and "there is a 10 cent jump across the board on liquor." It will now cost $2.55 for a bar shot and $3.20 for a typical cocktail (tequila sunrise, etc.).

Shooters are up 50 cents, but there is a hitch: you get to keep the glass. Each glass will have "stolen from Caps" stencilled on it in one of four different colors: red, blue, pink, or black.

Advance ticket change

by Bruce Corcoran

Advance pub tickets will be sold at the SAC service centre, and not in the Concourse, where SAC sold them last year.

The service centre is located beside the games room in the Gordon Wragg Center.

The advanced tickets will still be available the day before a pub in the morning, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Prices for Dee-Jay pubs remain the same as last year: $2 for students, and $4 for guests.

Top pitcher joins team

Softball hopes rest on hurler

— by Gregg McLachlan

The fortunes of Humber's women's softball team, mostly laden with misery in recent seasons, may have finally taken a turn for the better.

Rhonda Ramer, a highly touted pitcher with Pickering, last year's Canadian Junior women champions, has finally returned to Humber and the Hawks after a two-year absence.

The acquisition of Ramer by the Hawks finally gives the team a much-needed solid arm on the mound.

Ramer was enticed to join the Hawks via a scholarship, otherwise known officially as a Female Academic Athletic Award. Ramer is the first ever recipient of the award which covers her $350 tuition fee.

Rhonda Ramer

"I'm anxious to get back," she exclaimed. "I don't feel any pressure coming in. At the level I've played at, there is a lot of pressure but I think that can help contribute."

Ex-Hawks' coach Jim Bialek, now turned softball co-ordinator, recalls Ramer's previous brief stint with the maroon and white.

"She's not a big girl, but she's very composed and confident on the mound. She can easily be the best in the league."

While the addition of Ramer solidifies the club's pitching, the gap in fielding, marred last season by sloppy plays, remains a question mark for this season.

"She's capable of winning any game," Bialek said. "It's just a matter of fielding a team behind her."

With Bialek now out of the driver's seat, Debbie Reece, a player-coach last year, moves into control.

The Hawks waste no time getting into action. Tomorrow (Sept. 9) they face defending Ontario Colleges Athletic Association champion Seneca Braves. Thursday Sept. 10, on Humber's north campus diamond, the Hawks battle the Mohawk Mountaineers.

The Hawks recorded only one victory during regular league play last season.

NFL pool ready to start

by Gregg McLachlan

That whiz-kid of Humber athletics, Jim Bialek, the college's intramural activities co-ordinator, has wasted no time in getting the ball rolling this school year.

Bialek's phenomenally successful NFL pool of years past makes its return once again this week. If last year's NFL pool was any indication — 1600 entry sheets submitted over a 16 week period — this edition of the pool should be just as popular.

Entrants are required to select from each week's games the teams which they believe will be victorious.

At the conclusion of the NFL season, each pool participant will have their best ten weeks tallied. The person who accumulates the most predicted wins will be declared NFL pool champion and claim an official NFL football valued at $100 dollars.

In addition to the grand prize, there will be a free lunch in Caps awarded throughout the duration of the pool to the persons correctly selecting the highest number of winning teams in each of the 16 weeks.

Big crowd pleaser — Aerobics at Humber continues to be a favorite with staff and students.

Key coaching moves could bolster teams

by Gregg McLachlan

Recruiting of players has not been the only avenue Athletics Administration has taken in their efforts to field and ice the best teams in the province.

The recruitment of two new coaches, both highly recognized in their respective sports has added weight to Humber's arsenal.

OCAA women's basketball makes its return to Humber along with new coach Linda Versage, a teacher at Weston Collegiate. She enters the college coaching ranks with a brilliant track record as a high school coach.

In 1986, Versage led her Weston women's club to the York Senior Girls Championship. In addition, her team captured the Toronto district (TDIAA) championship as well as the Etobicoke Tip-Off tournament championship.

Humber athletic director Peter Maybury was quick to extend praise and is excited about Versage's credentials and what that could mean to the college's program.

"She wants to win, but she also has other values besides winning," Maybury said. "I'm convinced she has the element that we want."

The other major coaching acquisition made by the college is Phil Brown. Brown will take over from Don Morton as coach of men's volleyball. Brown's association with volleyball extends all the way to the national level.

"He could very well be the person to take that team over the top," Maybury stated, adding that Brown is recognized as one of the top volleyball coaches in Ontario.

On the ice, Humber's varsity Hawks hockey team, last year's Canadian College Athletic Association silver medalists, have added former NHLer and WHA player Bill Prentice to their coaching ranks.

Aerobics program a hit

by Gregg McLachlan

Fitness buffs won't be disappointed this fall as once again the college's athletic department plans to sweat it out with an extensive aerobics program.

The widely varied list of activities ranges from women's circuit training, basic stretch and tone, aerobics and more. Stretching from Sept. 14, to Dec. 4, each day of the week will boast at least two activities.

Debbie Bajoras-Ross, head of Humber's Athletics Injury Clinic, is the driving force behind the program. She explains that if past years are any indication it is expected that 500 applicants, both students and staff, will register. All registrants shall receive a shoe tab that permits entry into any of the weekly activities.

Bajoras-Ross stresses that the program is open to any students regardless of their ability.

"It's all based on working up to your own potential. That's what they (instructors) stress," she explains. "The instructors are trained in such a way that they expect everyone to work up to their potential. But they won't be pointing fingers at those who are not."

As well as working up to your best ability, she emphasizes the importance of not skipping the warm-up sessions prior to each class.

"We prefer people to come on time so they can warm-up. Our focus is to provide the safest fitness as possible."

Students and staff, either male or female, can register at the Athletics Injury Clinic located in the Gordon Wragg Student Centre. All activities are free.
