a career in the food industry

The food industry is rapidly changing and expanding to meet the needs and lifestyles of people in the '80's. Today the emphasis is on producing appealing and nutritious food that is convenient and easy to prepare.

In light of these changes, the Food Industry Technician Program at Humber College teaches you about Product Development, Food Processing, Preservation and Packaging, Quality Control and Marketing. This practical two-year program also provides you with on-the-job training in a variety of food corporations.

As a graduate you will find employment within the food industry in such areas as: Product Development, Quality Control labs, Food Product Marketing, and in Sensory Evaluation. Ninety per cent of last year's graduates found jobs in this field.

To find out more about Humber's Food Industry Technician program, contact Penny Bell at 675-3111, ext. 487. It's food for thought.
