

VP moves up on SU ladder

by John Wood

Lakeshore Student Union (SU) Vice-President Steve Matthew was successful in his bid to become next year's student president when he defeated Brian Coe, a third-year Business Administration student by 96 votes in last week's election. Pam Heirdl, a Community Studies student, received 165 votes to become vice-president as she defeated Nick Marszalkowsky who captured 78 votes.

Matthew, a first-year Community Studies student, received 172 votes compared with Coe's 78.

A total of 268 students voted out of an approximate 1,400 from both Lakeshore campuses making the turnout slightly less than last year.

Matthew said one of his major goals next year is to improve student services.

"People need certain services that are not being provided or not as adequately as they could be," he said.

Some of the services he plans to create or improve are a small loans service, information and referral, job registry, a grievance department, and a student ombudsmen to improve communications.

Another service Matthew intends to look into is a day-care centre.

"A day-care centre might be difficult because of regulations and the need might not be great enough," he said.

Entertainment is also very high on his list of priorities.

"We need to become far more diversified in our entertainment. The auditorium should be used more. Possibly for live concerts of a variety of musical styles," said Matthew.

Matthew hopes to improve the atmosphere at the pubs by investing in a light system, acquiring a better sound system, and increasing advertising.

"Also I'd like to see maybe once every couple of months a good group playing the pub," he added.

Although the student union is experiencing no financial difficulties, Matthew feels it will be necessary to raise student fees.

"If we are really going to do more I don't see how we can improve things and stay within our present budget," Matthew said.

Matthew hopes to form better relations with North Campus.

"I've talked with Joe Gauci (next year's North campus Students Association Council president) a few times," he said. "At this point we haven't come up with any collaborated ideas but I can easily see us working closely together."

He also plans to form a better relationship with Coven because he's 'sick and tired of picking up the Lakeshore issue and only reading stories about North Campus.'

"I want to know why there is nothing in the paper on our pubs or our sports," he said. "It's something that has to be done from both sides. I'm not blaming Coven."

Unknown policy threatens student

by Kim Aylesworth

A community studies student enrolled at Humber's Lakeshore campus, who last year received the President's Letter and recognition for outstanding performance in his field studies, may fail the course because of a policy which he claims he and fellow community studies students were unaware of.

At a Lakeshore Student Union (SU) meeting last week, Mitchell Bradford, a second-year community studies student, approached SU with a grievance concerning his placement studies. SU voted to assist Bradford.

Bradford, was unable to attend most of the council meeting, so he chose fellow community studies student, Tom Cahill, to represent him to the council. Cahill told council that Bradford had received a memorandum from his program co-ordinator, John Huot, on Feb. 23, concerning Bradford's request to change his field placement.

The memo said that Bradford had not complied with the course's policy regarding fourth semester placement, because policy required the student to complete his second year placement at only one institution. Consequently, Bradford was to be penalized 25 per cent, which would mean his placement evaluation is marked out of 75 per cent, rather than 100 per cent.

But it was the prepared statement at the end of the correspondence that required Bradford's signature, which he admits made him nervous.

I was told if I didn't sign it, I

'Inter-college politics' causes near cancellation of all-candidates meeting

by John Wood

Friday the 13th's all-candidates meeting which took place in the auditorium almost didn't happen. Student Union (SU) representative Roman Bijan blamed 'intercollege politics' for the meeting's near cancellation.

Bijan, the original co-ordinator, attempted to cancel the meeting after the SU members voted Tuesday to elect a new co-ordinator.

Bijan, self-appointed co-ordinator, said he had been organizing the meeting for a month and a half.

"This meeting started off as an individual project. To get the auditorium I had to book it through an organization associated with the college so I booked it through the SU," he said.

Change upsetting

Upset at the change, Bijan spent Tuesday night and Wednesday morning phoning the candidates telling them the meeting was cancelled.

"The candidates have a very busy schedule. It took me a while to get that date free for everybody," he said, "I spent a lot of time and I think I deserve some recognition."

One of the reasons Bijan wasn't allowed to be co-ordinator was the type of recognition he was after, said Steve Matthew, SU vice-president and newly elected president.

A SU event

"It's a student union event. We don't go for personal recognition," said Matthew.

"I'm not even certain he was disallowed to be co-ordinator of the meeting," said Matthew.

According to Matthew, Bijan's personality and things he had done in the past came up at the meeting.

Stepped-on students get aid

by Cathy Walters

Ed Philip, the newly re-elected New Democratic MPP for Etobicoke North riding will introduce a private member's bill to the legislature to make it illegal for apartment owners to force students to pay a year's rent in advance of the school year.

A Coven survey of apartment dwellers in the Kipling-Albion area was done last year and the Ontario Human Rights Commission labelled some of the practices used by apartment owners as "discriminatory."

The survey found apartment owners were discriminating on the basis of sex and making students pay all their rent in advance. Problems arose because some apartment owners refused to rent to students or made students have co-signers for their leases.

A report by the commission was submitted to the legislature two and a half years ago with 97 recommendations, some of which ensure rights for students 18 and over.

The report was re-introduced last December and on its second reading when last week's provincial election was called. When the new legislature takes over the bill must go back to the first reading.

"I expect it will be re-introduced," said Jill Armstrong, manager of programs at the commission.

The survey questioned students and rental officers about rental practices and discovered several apartments on Wilson Avenue will rent a two-bedroom apartment to a male and two females, but will not rent to three females. If three girls want to get an apartment in that building, they must rent a three-bedroom apartment.

Jim Stratton, a director for the Commission, said the practice "sounds immoral."

"That's discrimination on the basis of sex," he said.

Doug Beecroft, lawyer for the Attorney General's office said, "it

Hawks win men's Central Canadian hockey championship

by Tony Poland

A high spirited Humber Hawks varsity hockey team advanced to the Canadian Colleges championships after claiming the Ontario and Canadian titles in less than a week.

The Hawks won the Central Canadian crown by embarrassing Manitoba's Assiniboine Cougars 6-1 and 12-6 in a two game total-goals final at Westwood Arena on the weekend.

Last Monday, Humber defeated the Seneca College Braves 6-5 for the provincial title on an overtime goal by seldom-used forward Scott Adamson. The Braves were undefeated throughout the regular season and the playoffs before the championship match.

The fast paced game, which saw the lead change hands four times, ended at 6:16 of the first overtime period when Adamson took a pass from Ken Addis, moved down the left side and put the puck behind the Seneca goalie.

Adamson didn't think much of the winning goal, which came off a low soft shot. "I fanned on it and it went right between the goalies legs," he said.

The Humber forward joined the team at Christmas but wasn't given a regular shift until the playoffs. "I knew I was good enough to play, I just needed to prove it."

And Admin said... 'Let there be light'

by Lynne Fitzgerald

Students using the College's white parking lot after hours will no longer have to locate their cars in total darkness now that the lights in that area have been repaired.

According to Ken Cohen, director of Outside Services, the electrical system failed several months ago after a paved walkway caused the ground underneath to shift. The pipe housing the lighting wires bent and shorted-out the system.

Although the problem has been diagnosed for several months, it could not be repaired until the frost and accompanying water had dissipated.

Staff busy

However, the lighting system is not the only problem plaguing the white lot. Pot holes have been surfacing since September and have kept maintenance staff busy trying to fill them in.

This inconvenience will be remedied for good this summer, as plans are in the works to have the lot paved.

"We usually pave the lots after two years," Cohen said, "the gravel in the lot has settled enough to pave it now."

Costs rising

The cost, which will include paving, storm drains and curbs and painting parking lines will run the college upwards of $80,000 according to Cohen.

"We want to get it done quickly," he said "because the cost of asphalt is always rising."

For this reason the College is going to be accepting bids for the job within the month and Cohen said he hopes they can begin work by early May.

The two-and-a-half acre lot presently houses over 350 cars.

The students of the college's North campus will be able to take a short rest from their daily grind and at the same time, help save lives, as the semi-annual Humber Blood Donor Clinic kicks-off this week. From Monday through Wednesday, experienced Red Cross workers will be stationed in the concourse to help make the slogan of "Give And Let Live" become a reality. The clinic is presented by the Public Relation students in co-operation with the Red Cross and is setting the goal of 660 units for Humber this time. As always, refreshments will be served to all donors.

sounds like discrimination on the basis of sex, so it's illegal. I can't see how that's lawful."

Beecroft said the student discriminated against can complain to the Human Rights Commission and it will mediate with the accused apartment owners. The commission can form a board of inquiry to look into the problem and make the apartment owner pay any damages the student may have suffered.

The survey also uncovered many apartment managers who openly refused to rent to students. Most said they refused because they have had trouble in the past. They said tenants complained of excessive noise and damage.

Again, Stratton disagreed with that rental practice saying "students should be assessed on their merits as people."

The Human Rights Code states no one can be refused accommodation because of "race, creed, color, sex, ancestry, nationality or place of origin."

The Commission has recommended criminal record, physical handicap and sexual orientation be added to the list with the provision that exemptions could be recommended.

The only exceptions to the code are for residences set up exclusively as male or female, or where a person is residing in a private home with the owners and has to share washroom or kitchen facilities with them.

The survey also uncovered a case of an apartment manager who previously would not rent to students, but in September changed his mind. Although he will now offer eight and 10-month leases to students, he will only do so if all the rent is paid in advance. The student would be required to pay $4000 in advance.

"This is not a situation covered in the code," said Stratton.

"My opinion is that it is legal," said Beecroft. "It is not a security deposit but a performance of obligation, but the legislature should decide."

Philip said the bill has to be fought as a "tenant issue not a discrimination issue."

Some apartment owners also required parents to co-sign the lease, even when the students were over the age of majority. Stratton was uncertain if this type of practice is covered by the code.

"It's not necessary, because a person over 18 can enter into a contract but the landlord wants to make sure the student has the money," said Beecroft.

The private members bill that Philip will introduce will come before the house within two years or whenever it comes up in the lottery that all the new bills are put in and drawn from.

Go-Go-Go!

Every week for years now, Pete and the boys have been getting together for a game of hockey. And they have been doing it all by themselves.

Pete is Pete Maybury, and the boys are the Humber Hawks men's varsity hockey team. They are a winning hockey team, yet not very many people care, let alone know about them. Students and staff from this college have rarely supported the Hawks. Even after they became Ontario champions in 1978, the fans stayed away. This weekend was no different.

The Hawks represented Humber in the Central Canadian hockey championships and a meagre crowd of only 150 showed up. And that number is almost 150 more than who cared to attend during the regular season.

It's not as if the Hawks are a losing team—good God, it was a Central Canadian championship. To advance to the series the men had to beat Seneca College. A team that had not lost a game all season, a team which had at least 500 spectators out to each and every game.

Have students been rushing home right after school to do their homework? Is that their excuse for not supporting the Hawks? That's very unlikely. Or maybe, the arena is too far away—a whole two blocks away. Or is 75 cents too much to spend.

As you are reading this, the Humber Hawks are probably famous everywhere to everybody but the people they represent.

This weekend, by virtue of their victories over Manitoba, the Hawks will represent Humber College in the Canadian College hockey championships to be held at Conestoga College in Kitchener. This is the weekend fans can redeem themselves and support the Hawks.

After all it wouldn't be fair to Pete and the boys if nobody saw them with the Canadian title.

Big Blue wins

Premier William Davis' wish came true last Thursday. He has the majority government he wanted for some six years.

For Conservative supporters, the next five years will be happy ones. For faculty and support staff, and students, it may mean five long troublesome years.

A majority government for faculty and staff could possibly lead to very tough, beleaguered negotiations. If past bargaining experiences are any indication, the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) demands could fall upon unsympathetic ears.

With the majority government, it may prove to become increasingly difficult to reach adequate settlements without a strike.

Students could face further spending restraints by the provincial government. It must be pointed out the Conservative campaign never mentioned increasing its education budget—to be more specific, its post-secondary education budget. It can be expected provincial grants will continue not to match inflation.

The Conservatives began tightening the belt in 1978 with a minority government, in some cases to the point where many could no longer breathe. It is hoped past spending practices by the Conservative government will change for the better.

Congratulations, Mr. Davis.

Sympathy for TTC riders

I would like to thank you for the opportunity to allow me to comment on one of the articles that appeared in Coven on Feb. 23. The article in question is entitled "Speak Easy" and the author is one Steve Cossaboom.

I felt that this article was brilliantly thought-out, daring, and devilishly underhanded. My sincere sympathies go out to all you poor people who are forced to use the services of the "Toronto Tyranny Corporation"! In our city, we recently acquired a new transit system which consists of four buses which seem to provide regular and satisfactory service.

However, in Mr. Cossaboom's article, there seemed to be one phrase which appears to be very Central-Canada biased—"oil paddies of Alberta." Steve, you show me an oil paddy in Alberta, and I'll show you a CN Tower that can take off and orbit the earth! This statement contained in the article makes Alberta sound so...Siberia-ish. It should be pointed out at this time that Alberta is a land of virtual paradise. We boast a low population density, low pollution level, the Calgary Stampeder Cowgirls, and that of a land of untold wealth which may be tapped by any Canadian who chooses to live here!

It's actually kind of ironical when you think of it because most people out here think of Central Canada as a center for fashion-conscious, one-track minded, cynical automatons that rush around on the subway system endeavoring to make the 9-to-5 job which everybody holds out there. And furthermore, thought of as a last resort to live as compared to wonderful, fresh Alberta. So, Mr. Cossaboom, that's what you get for a little slip of the typewriter! Again, thank you for printing my letter—Hello Joanne Krebs, wherever you are—and I would ask at this time that I be put on your mailing list for Coven.

Speak Easy

by Marlene Hait

We are unraveling. The Canadian cultural mosaic which professor John Porter analysed so thoroughly a little more than a decade ago is coming apart at the seams.

And the Anglo-French, East-West tensions, so well publicized, are but the largest holes in the Canadian fabric. Other moths of dissension have started nibbling at the very foundation of our society. They include snide racial remarks, ethnic jokes and name calling.

The not-so-funny slurs and taunts tear at the unique Canadian cultural fabric. Those who mouth them do themselves no credit.

Many students at Humber are the first in their families to get a college education. Of this they are proud. Many come at a financial sacrifice to those families. The opportunity to do so is part of the greatness of Canada.

But Paki jokes, Italian jokes, Jewish jokes, and name calling do funny things to pride.

Sadly, they are heard here in the halls of Humber. As a community college, Humber reflects the ethnic diversity of Canada. So it's disheartening to hear the racial slurs, the half-jests and the outright bigotry normally associated with rednecks here in an institution of higher learning. It's also frightening.

For what becomes morally acceptable soon gains legal recognition. Witness the organization of the Ku Klux Klan here in Ontario.

The point is we diminish our own freedoms when we slur others. No group is immune. If we aren't vigilant in protecting everyone's human dignity, we lose our own.

Individual personal behavior is the only safeguard from the poison of bigotry. We shouldn't mouth racial slurs, even in jest; but more importantly, we must loudly register our disapproval at those who do.

Many here at Humber have never known another system of government, and perhaps we take for granted our freedoms and our ethnic harmony. We must not.

When we allow any group to be maligned and scapegoated, another thread of the Canadian fabric comes undone.

It must be remembered that individual freedom, as Benjamin Franklin wrote, extends only as far as it doesn't impinge on anyone else's.

By personal example, and by showing intolerance to those who get their jollies with ethnic jokes, perhaps each one of us can repair a small part of the cultural fabric of Canada.

If you think "dangling participles" are rare creatures found in the jungles of South America—you are wrong. In reality, they can lurk amidst the sentences of your research paper and the Language Development Centre at Humber is the place to go to for solutions.

The "dangling" creatures are put into context by two Human Studies instructors, Austra Karka and Cecilia Vasiloff. In a lounge-like setting, located in E345, time and energy are dedicated to making students proficient in and comfortable with the English language as a written, oral and reading skill.

The valuable resource material is available to students Monday to Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. either by referral to the centre via a course instructor or simply by dropping in. Although, in the latter case an appointment is not necessary, it would help the instructors in scheduling their time in the most effective manner because Karka and Vasiloff give each student individual attention.

The Centre is entering its third successful year of operation and according to the most recent report on the Human Studies Division,

LDC kills 'creatures'

212 students used its services in the 1980 fall semester. Of these, 148 were referred directly by a course instructor, based on a particular problem preventing the student from successfully completing the workload within the course.

John Forster, a first-year general arts and science student, is at the centre in his spare time at the suggestion of his English instructor.

"Better writing skills will result in higher marks. This is important to me because I want to enter the advertising and design program in the fall," said Forster.

Sometimes, especially around lunch time, the demand for instructors exceeds the supply. Therefore, Karka would like to see more staffing of the centre during peak periods.

Linda Dmytriw, another drop-in student in first-year business administration, spends three to five hours a week of her spare time in the centre. She works on writing and concentrates on ideas.

"In class the instructor sometimes jumps over ideas. Not at the centre. Here they tutor me at my own pace," said Dmytriw.

Having "a few screws loose" is a well-known idiomatic expression, but for those reaching for a screwdriver instead, the Language Development Centre will clear up any misunderstanding, especially when English is their second language. Rene Wong, a second-year architectural design student, has been in Canada three years from his native Hong Kong. During the weekly five to seven hours he spends at the centre, improving his writing is his main goal.

Whether English is their first or second language, more than 300 students use this private tutoring service at Humber College. The reasons for attending vary as much as their ethnic backgrounds, but they all agree on the tremendous benefits.

Legalities are a part of our lives

by Anne-Marie Demore

Legalities are a part of life that every student can run into. But salvation is offered, by SAC, through the Legal Aid clinic every Wednesday afternoon.

The idea of having Legal Aid at Humber originated with lawyer Mike McDonald, of the Day, McDonald, Pollock, and Fysh law firm. Universities have Legal Aid clinics and he thought community colleges must have the same need.

McDonald contacted the Ontario

Legal Aid Society and SAC about the possibility of having a Legal Aid clinic.

"It's an important part of student life to be able to get legal advice on campus," said Sandy DiCresce, SAC's Activities coordinator.

McDonald, with the clinic since its inception in 1976, finds "great satisfaction in giving students information that relieves their anxiety."

Every Wednesday from 1 p.m.

to 3 p.m., McDonald talks with an average of ten people. He said the majority of legal problems deal with traffic violations and landlord-tenant difficulties.

"Students want an objective as-

I shot the president

by Steve Pecar

I will shoot the president.

This was the one thought that kept racing through my mind as I rode the elevator down to the lobby.

How should I do it? Would I try to infiltrate security and lie in wait for him, or, would I burst out from the crowd of mindless onlookers and shoot in surprise?

As I headed down the corridors of New York's streets, I was met by dozens, no hundreds, of the city's "Meninblue" who cast razor edged silhouettes against the grey-black night of the concrete jungle.

While it is true that I had only been in the city on vacation, it was also true that I had wanted "his" smiling mug hanging from over my fireplace ever since he had dethroned that buck-toothed peanut farmer.

He, like myself, was in town for pleasure. But for him, the entertainment he seeks provides entertainment for those he leads.

My friends and allies Norm Man and Mark E. were with me. So was Pseudo Boom, who unlike the rest of us, carried extra equipment.

We chose to attack by infiltrating and edged in as close to the theatre as possible and took position beside the NBC film crew.

The cry of the escort, signaled to me that my destiny was near at hand. After a short while the motorcade arrived and came to a halt. The doors of the limo opened, and "he" stepped out.

With a quick wave to the cheering crowd he turned and strode to the door. Now within range "he" was mine. I cocked my 50 millimeter barrel to my eye and fired.

As I sat in my hotel room the taste of Budweiser was more than refreshing. Pseudo Boom and Mark E. drank with me, so did Norm Man. I had shot The President, three times, with my Pentax camera.

What is typical in New York can be startling to someone raised in Toronto.

The bar life, for example, is everything it's cracked up to be. At one point a bar fly approached a pretty journalism student, leaned on her chair and eyeball-to-eyeball said, "would you like to come to Plato's Retreat with me?" Just like that. No sidestepping, no preamble. The answer was no thanks.

Without being mugged or robbed, unless you include overcharging, student assessment of a problem," said McDonald. "So I don't get personally involved. They just want to know what guidelines to take that are acceptable.

"There's always discrimination in law," he added, "People forget the system of justice is not completely objective."

If a person looks "scruffy" and is not polite to a judge and another person looks "spiffy" and is polite, obviously the judge will be harder on the first, said McDonald.

Unlike DiCresce, McDonald doesn't think Legal Aid is working up to its capacity. But what surprises McDonald is how many students come back and thank him for the advice.

McDonald can't assist students in court battles in his capacity as legal advisor, but students can go see him at his own office for a fee.

If students need legal aid immediately during the week, they're referred to the Legal Aid service at Albion Mall.

New York too tough for Toronto

by Dave Silburt

Officer, over here!" the woman shrieked, as a man scuttled down the dingy street in one of the seamier sections of New York City. As the man ducked into a 25-cent sleazy movie parlor, the foot patrolmen followed.

Moments later, a blue and white New York City Police cruiser screamed to the scene, fishtailed to a halt in front of the peep-show parlor, and disgorged a young policewoman who entered on the run.

Close behind, an unmarked car snapped up to the curb, Kojak-style. Several detectives spilled out into the street and trooped inside, while uniformed police dispersed the gathering crowd of rubbernecks.

Among the crowd, Humber College part-time cinematography instructor Godfrey Jordan and student Basil Young watched the drama unfold. They had been in the city less than two hours. "It was heavy," Jordan said later, in the comparative quiet of his hotel room.

Jordan was in New York along with 43 cinematography students and 18 journalism students on a four-day foray to that city.

The New York Times, NBC Studios, Radio City Music Hall and the UN headquarters all fell under the scrutiny of the touring students, who learned in their travels and travails that all those stories they had heard about New York are absolutely true. It's wonderful. But it's a tough town.

How tough is it? Tough enough to cause police foot patrols to travel in threes, with pistols in uncovered holsters and batons in hand. Tough enough that it's advisable to travel in mixed groups rather than singly or in pairs, says Jordan, who knows New York better than most of the group he was with. It's easy to be lulled into a false sense of security, but the awakening can be rude for those who rely on Toronto survival reflexes in these mean streets.

dents managed to attend Broadway plays, visit Times Square, go to a New York Knicks' basketball game, catch Mickey Rooney ducking in a stage door, watch a wino vomit in the street, and see President Reagan with the Secret Service and half the NYPD riding shotgun.

They also managed to see—and survive—the New York subway system. New York's subway stations are menacing places. The stairways gape onto the street like toothy mouths ready to swallow you.

U.S. President Reagan

Stepping past the concrete teeth and down the stone gullet, you enter a world where the harsh glare of naked light bulbs casts unnatural shadows on the watchful, predatory faces of the denizens of the catacombs.

Grimy platforms and graffiti-covered trains are guarded by police officers, but the police can't cover everything. In the trouble spots, Guardian Angels, the self-proclaimed vigilantes identified by their military-style red berets, hang around staring sourly at passers-by. They stand ready to avert violence or make a citizen's arrest. Or whatever.

The presence of these red berets, many of whom served their apprenticeships in street gangs, dramatizes the jungle warfare mentality of the labyrinthine maze below the streets.

In the streets above, the city seems a world in itself. It's a world of contrasts, where stores like Gucci's lie only a short cab ride from sordid little bars and porno theatres. It's a world many prefer to inhabit, despite urban decay and palpable danger on the streets at night. It's definitely not like Toronto: if we have as many murders in a year as New York does in a month, it's a bad year.

New York is a glamorous and dangerous city, a way of life and an adventure.

Though perhaps few of us would want to live there, many will probably return. The place is just too big to see in four days.

New York, New York. It sounds so nice, they had to name it twice...

AWARDS AND FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Humber College currently offers four means of assistance through:

1. SCHOLARSHIPS 2. BURSARIES 3(a) GRANTS 3(b) LOANS

1. SCHOLARSHIP FUND: All scholarships at Humber College are made available through the generosity of businesses, industries and individuals who are interested in recognizing those students with academic proficiency in their chosen course of studies. The donors usually outline the standards they wish a student to achieve to be eligible for a scholarship, and the winner is identified by the faculty of the Division.
2. BURSARY FUND: Like our scholarships, all bursaries are made available through donations made by interested businesses, industries and individuals. Students who wish to receive a bursary, may apply in the Financial Aids Office. Those students eligible to receive a bursary must demonstrate both academic proficiency and proven financial need. A bursary will be awarded to a student at any time during the Academic Year providing the academic grades and financial needs are identified. There are two groups of bursaries which are available:
 - a) Designated Bursaries—bursaries which are available to help student in SPECIFIC programs.

Blueprint for the 1980's

This is the first of a four-part series by Coven reporter Tim Gall on the future of community colleges in Ontario.

While the future of Ontario's Community Colleges could be a subject of a $100,000 six-month study this spring, many officials are speculating what lies ahead for the 22 institutions.

According to Council of Regents (COR) spokesman Norman Williams, COR will conduct the study—dubbed "A Look at the Blueprint for Colleges in the 1980's"—if government funding is forthcoming.

Williams indicated that although colleges are "very healthy" right now, the time to look for problems is before they happen. Now that new forms of learning, specifically with computers, are coming into being, the study will have to set up a direction for colleges to take in the future.

The study, Williams said, will look at changes in the job marketplace and also examine manpower needs, economics, and technology. Generally, it will point out what the colleges can do to better prepare students for the technological changes expected this decade.

Howat Noble, director of College Affairs for the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, suggests colleges will have to train students in micro-electronics, specifically word processors.

Word processing will create a phenomenal job market, said Noble. It will be up to the colleges to keep pace with information processing.

The major challenge, Noble said, will be to continue promoting colleges as a place for re-training or to change careers.

If colleges maintain their success in this promotion, enrolment will not decrease as it has in high schools, Noble said.

"If you want a job, you will go to a community college," he insisted.

He indicated students comparing colleges for course offerings may be reduced in the future as well, but this will not be detrimental to learning. Noble said centralization or specialization of courses may take place in the colleges. Rather than having a number of colleges offer a course, there may only be one college offering the course—but it will be the best, he said.

Such a change would become absolutely necessary if government cutbacks become a reality for Ontario's colleges.

According to John Kravis, the director of Fiscal Planning for the ministry, something in Ontario will suffer and it may very well be the colleges.

"We're expecting the worst," he said.

Tom Norton, Humber vice-president Academic said, "The colleges are not speaking clearly enough or often enough in the political forum in which we survive."

But as Noble puts it, the future of community colleges, for the most part is bright.

"The colleges are the best equipped education system in Ontario to get students jobs."

The year is 1984. Virtually everyone at Humber College is using word processors, or Video Display Terminals. Computers have invaded a college, which, only four years earlier was equipped mostly with typewriters—typewriters that didn't work.

"Big Brother" sits back in his chair, a wide grin on his face. "Big Brother" is Tom Norton, vice-president Academic, and Humber's resident future-gazer.

Humber is in the forefront of planning for the future, and according to Norton that's the only way to go.

"We need the solutions way before we have the problems," says Norton. "Humber has been getting ready way ahead of time, and will continue to do so."

Norton doesn't find himself caught by surprises that were forecast five to six years ago. An example of this planning is the heavy use of computers already taking place at Humber.

This year more than 750 students use the main-frame computer, and next year the number will increase to 2,000. Many offices throughout Humber have word processors and Coven's newsroom is equipped with Video Display Terminals (VDT's). Coven is the only student newspaper of its kind to use VDT's, and there are more of them located in Coven than anywhere else in Canada, with the exception of daily newspapers.

Norton insists every student will use terminals in the future. He said there is no option except to expand and provide the machines if the college "is to stay in business."

Norton is also preparing for an increase in on-the-job training and apprenticeship programs. He foresees an increase in the direct relationship between industry and the college in an attempt to further meet the educational needs of students.

"Our primary marketing apparatus is a happy graduate," he said. Pleasing and, more specifically, properly training Humber students is the ultimate goal of the college.

"Looking down the pipe" is important if a college is to satisfy its students, he said, and Humber is adapting quicker than the other 21 Ontario colleges.

He cites Humber's development of solar energy programs and the yachting program as examples of the jump Humber has over other colleges.

The vice-president also realizes a high quality of staff, technological equipment, and environment must be maintained in order to keep a high reputation. But, he warns, a college cannot rely on its past, it must not become stagnant, instead it must continually look ahead. And, he boasts, you must look ahead cautiously.

"You can't panic when trying to build a reputation, you've got to take your time," he said. "You can't rush or you'll fumble."

He goes on to say that in this game you're allowed only one fumble. And Norton is determined Humber will not lose the ball—or in this case, its reputation—but will continue to score heavily.

He indicates that when planning for the future, flexibility is essential.

"For colleges, history has meant change, not tradition," notes Norton.

Humber has always been first when it comes to flexibility and change, he boasts. "Being the best, not the biggest is an absolute priority."

"If we don't have the finest programs available, we're cheating everybody," he said.

"The biggest challenge is doing the best job with the resources you have, and resources rarely match our dreams."

"People remember the rest of their lives if they had a good learning experience," Norton said. "They remember that college not only did something for them but also to them."

So as Norton prepares for the future he suggests students must prepare to be participants in the change.

Humber in the forefront

Humber is well ahead of the other 21 colleges in preparing for the future. A heavy use of computers and the development of unique courses are a few of the steps the college has taken. Resident future-gazer Tom Norton says there are more steps to come and students must be willing to participate as Humber steps into the future. Photo by Steve Cossaboom.

Flautist symposium planned

by Marlene Hait

Three days at the National Flute Association meeting in Boston last year convinced Humber President Gordon Wragg and Creative and Communication Arts (CCA) division Chairman Al Michalek that Humber would be an ideal location for a one-day flute symposium.

That conviction will soon be reality when 400 flautists and aficionados from across Canada will be drawn to Humber on March 28.

Wragg, whose interest in the flute stems from his youth when he played in a military band, credits music student Doriann Forrester, and her committee, with "doing the bulk of the work" in arranging the program.

Forrester staged quite a coup in arranging the appearance of premier flautist William Bennett. Bennett plays with the English Chamber Orchestra and teaches at the prestigious Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields outside of London, England.

According to Wragg, Bennett "is a pro's pro" and a great teacher "on a par with James Galway."

Forrester says getting Bennett was a "matter of being in the right place at the right time."

After contacting his agent in Atlanta, Georgia, Forrester persuaded her to fit Humber into Bennett's limited touring schedule.

Wragg acknowledged the excellence of Humber's music program will only be enhanced by the symposium.

In addition to a Saturday evening recital Bennett will also teach a master class at 10 a.m. that day. A master class is conducted before a live audience.

The participants must audition to participate. To date, 28 flautists have submitted tapes.

Master classes will also be taught by Jean Baxtresser, principal flautist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra (TSO), and Nora Schulman, assistant principal flute with the TSO.

Each master class generally consists of no more than five participants, each of whom has attained a high degree of proficiency, so the audience is in for some excellent performances.

To draw a wide audience, program costs have been kept reasonable, according to Wragg.

Recital tickets are $5. Audit tickets for those wishing to attend master classes and the recital are $10. Master class participants will pay a fee of $20 for either the Baxtresser or Schulman class, and $30 for the Bennett class.

Judging by the response so far, Wragg said the symposium will be a great success.

Rhythm sticks a big hit by A. L. Cavanaugh

Humber's percussion ensemble made no excuses for coughing in the midst of their performance at the Lecture Theatre last week.

Members of the ensemble had planned to hack in harmony as part of the debut performance of Piece Percussionique No. 3 by Humber instructor Michael Horwood. Horwood said the piece reflected his avant-garde ideas from the 1960's.

Ahead of its time or not, Piece Percussionique No. 3 certainly was different. The humorous piece produced a rich variety of sounds using some very cheap instruments. The harmonious coughs of the performers, a balloon burst against a gong and plastic-topped toothpicks dropped on a tympani made the piece one of the audience's favorites.

Not strong enough

Vocalist Julie Sparks took on a little more than she could handle when the percussionists performed Basho Songs, a piece based on six poems. While Sparks held long notes very well, her voice was not quite strong enough to produce the clear, sweet sound the piece called for. As a result her voice was flat on some of the notes. However she must be given credit for such an ambitious undertaking. Basho Songs is extremely difficult to perform.

Two other pieces highlighted the afternoon performance.

Concert for Percussion and Piano featured students Michael Schuett and Terry Kroetsch. Schuett was a wizard as the percussionist. Over the course of the work he played 15 different instruments, astounding the audience with his lightning quick movement and talent.

Facinating work

Music For Pieces Of Wood was a fascinating work featuring five of the percussionists, each playing a different kind of wood block. New York's Steve Reich wrote the work and musicians filled the lecture theatre with its African tribal rhythms. This was one of the best performances of the afternoon.

Junk Food Blues was a refreshing break between the more serious works and the audience clapped along to its jazzy beat.

In a word, the percussion ensemble can best be described as adventurous. Their selections were unique, interesting well-performed and revealed the enormous capabilities of percussion instruments.

wouldn't get a placement grade, which means I would fail the course," he said.

The statement read:
"I was aware of the Community Studies Program policy on field training as stated above when I decided to terminate my placement at Swansea Village Co-op.

I agree to abide by the conditions listed above concerning the change of my placement to the Ontario Camp Leadership Centre.

I understand that by signing this memorandum I am waiving the right to appeal the conditions under which my request to change placements is granted, including the 25% penalty in the final grade for fourth semester field training."

No guidelines

"There are no policies or guidelines that say a student must stay at one placement for two semesters. But the real issue is how can he deny a student the right to appeal," said Bradford.

Second-year community studies students are expected to find their own placement in the third semester, however, if the student is unable to find his own, the instructor helps out. Bradford was unable to find a placement, so Huot set him up at Swansea Village Co-operative, located in the Queen Street and Lakeshore Blvd. area. Swansea is an organization that helps individuals and groups to get together and establish cheaper housing.

Highly disputed

Bradford said he was unhappy with the placement.

"I highly disputed the placement from the beginning, but I had nothing else," he said.

Bradford said he continued to look for an alternate placement and finally found one with the Ontario Camp Leadership Centre, which is run by the Ministry of Culture and Recreation. He sent in a request to transfer. When he received the memo from Huot he was told to have it signed the next day, or he would fail the placement section of the course. The deadline for his signature was then extended to March 16.

"I consider this problem to be more than a personal affront. I feel it is high time that students are made aware of their rights within Humber College," he said, adding, "To often students accept arbitrary decisions at face value, without questioning the validity of those decisions."

Osler fire safety gets evaluated

by Nancy Pack

The fire alarm system at the Osler campus is currently under review by the college's Board of Governors (BOG).

At the beginning of last month BOG asked the Physical Resources department to check fire protection and alarm systems at Osler residence.

Ken Cohen, physical resources director, stressed the existing alarm system is not inadequate or substandard, but BOG is concerned about future fire code requirements.

Better protection

"The building is equipped with heat sensors in the lounges of each of the building's ten floors. The building has better fire protection than (present) fire codes demand. What the board is concerned about is the requirements for a new fire code which will probably be implemented as early as next year," he said.

BOG asked The Edwards Fire Protection Company to examine the building and make recommendations.

Cohen said the Edwards report comprises half of an overall study into fire protection at the campus.

He added that he and Osler residence manager Marnie McAlpine will meet with North York fire department building inspectors, and representatives from the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office to review North York fire protection standards for the campus.

Recommendations made

"The Edwards company report is one which outlines the ultimate in fire alarm systems. The North York fire department recommends an adequate system. We plan to combine the two and use the median to form the fire protection at Osler," Cohen said.

The Edwards report suggests replacing heat sensors with smoke detectors not only in the lounges but also in the rooms. It also suggests increasing the size of the fire bells at the residence.

BOG's next meeting at the end of the month will determine exactly what will be done to improve already adequate fire protection, Cohen said.

Swan song for Lady Hawks

Humber's womens hockey team missed the chance to become Ontario champions when they were defeated 6-3 by Sir Sanford Fleming College. The OCAA final, which was hosted by Canadore College and held March 13 in Oakville, brought a quick end to what would have been an otherwise successful season for the team. Having just played one season together as a unit, the squad finished first in the over-all league standings and also accomplished the amazing feat losing only three regular season games in two seasons. Hawks downed in finals

by Chris Ballard

Three quick goals in the first two minutes spelled doom for Humber's women hockey team when they faced Sir Sanford Fleming College at the Ontario

College Athletic Association (OCAA) finals.

The playoff was hosted by Canadore College and was held March 13 in Oakville.

Despite the early setback, the Hawks kept the pressure on by scoring once in each period. Unfortunately, Sir Sanford kept pace, resulting in a final score of six to three and the championship going to Sir Sanford.

There were no major flaws in either teams' play, the Hawks just met their match in this superior team.

Wheeler after the game. "We played hockey the way it's supposed to be played; fast, skillfull and exciting."

The action on the ice backed those words. Excitement electrified the air as witnessed by the small, but vocal, Humber cheering section. Hockey of this calibre is rare and the crowd took advantage and became emotionally involved.

Trying to pick the one outstanding player of this game is difficult. All the team members gave everything they had, and then some. But special mention must be

'It was a gallant effort'

What problems the Hawks did have centered around their inability to get past Sir Sanford's unique defence. That strategy consisted of them sticking every available player in front of their net and praying the Hawks couldn't put the puck past 12 legs. Perhaps if the Hawks had shot the puck from a distance, rather than trying to carry it in, they would have scored more goals.

"There's no disgrace in losing," said Hawk coach Don given to left winger Lisa Maik for her super performance. She consistently out-skated and out-manouvered the opposition but she had trouble slipping the puck past the hot goaltender.

Captain Lynn Badger was also outstanding. It's the Hawks' loss she's graduating and won't be back next year.

Considering Humber has had a women's hockey team for only six years, and of those six they've reached the OCAA championship three times, the current Hawks, with their league championship and runner-up position in the OCAA tournament, have done superb.

Also amazing is this team has only one season together under its belt. Just think what they'll do next year with the added experience.

As SAC President Harry McAvoy said after the game, "it was a gallant effort." Hopefully they'll be giving us more of this exciting hockey next year.

Hockey Hawks claim two championship titles four meetings against the Braves this year, opened the scoring early in the first period on a Warren Giovannini goal.

Giovannini and linemates Dwayne Rosenberg and Dana Shutt provided Humber with plenty of offensive muscle totalling six points in the game.

The Hawks fell behind 2-1 before taking charge of the game. Goals by Mark Bannerman and Rosenberg gave Humber a second period lead.

Humber went into the dressing room with a 4-3 lead after dominating the second frame but a series of third period penalties gave Seneca the chance to catch up and eventually pull ahead.

The Braves had a 5-4 lead with 32 seconds to play when defence-man Conrad Wiggan jammed a loose puck into the Seneca net.

The Braves seemed to be content to just shoot the puck at every chance, in the overtime. Usually the Seneca shots were from outside the blue line and presented little or no problem to goalie Dave Jennings.

The Hawks worked the puck into the Brave zone looking for scoring chances and at 6:16 the Humber strategy paid off when Adamson's shot put the game, and Seneca's season to an end.

In the Central Canadian championship, the Hawks totalled 18 goals in two games to defeat the Manitoba champions.

Assiniboine College, who sported a record of 31 wins, 12 ties and five losses, were outclassed by the Ontario champion Hawks in both skating and scoring.

Humber produced the first goal of the series when Darrin Etmanski knocked the puck in after a scramble in front of the Assiniboine net. Etmanski also finished the scoring for the Hawks on a pretty passing play in the third period.

If the Assiniboine Cougars had a friend at the arena on Friday night it was the referee. The calls for the game were seemingly one-sided with Humber getting the short end of the stick.

When the hinges of the penalty box weren't being well worked, the Hawks were busy putting the puck in the net. Scott Adamson, who claimed the winning goal in overtime, Gord Grant, Jerry Cantarutti and Karl Sobotka each had single markers.

The Cougars switched netminders at the beginning of the third period with hopes of making a comeback but those hopes were dashed by two Hawk goals.

In the final game yesterday, the Hawks relied on two goals that were scored while they were playing two men short.

The game for the most part, was played sloppily by both teams. Coach Peter Maybury was not proud of his team's play although they won the championship. "I'm happy but we did not play well. We only played good enough to win". The Hawks now advance to the Canadian championships this weekend at Conestoga College in Kitchener. Humber will play in a two-game series against a team from the Maritimes and if they win will play against the winner of Conestoga College and a Western-Canadian team.

Hawks' Adamson an unlikely hero

by Tim Gall

Scott Adamson, a bench-warmer for most of the season with the Humber Hawks men's hockey team, will never forget the goal he scored in sudden-death overtime last week against Seneca College.

At the 6:16 mark, Adamson scored the goal which won the Ontario college championship and thrust the Hawks into the Central Canadian finals this past weekend.

Adamson, a most unlikely hero, started playing with the Hawks just after Christmas but was only recently inserted into the line-up because of an abundance of injuries. Ironically, he had considered quitting the team because of the lack of ice-time.

Then came the goal, a quick wrist shot off a pass from Ken Addis. It was Humber's first victory over previously undefeated Seneca this season.

"The goal was the highlight of my career," Adamson said. "It made the whole year worthwhile. I'm glad I didn't quit."

Adamson, a 19-year-old from Mississauga probably won't return to Humber next year and hopes to play for the Junior A Dixie Bees next season. He played a few games with them last year and said his chances of making the team are good. If he does return to Humber to finish his marketing course, he'll try out for the Hawks if only they're as talented as this season's squad.

Humber hopefuls to write 3 tests

by Norman Nelson

New students to Humber College this fall may find themselves writing two other tests besides communications.

Current Humber students wrote a communications test when they first entered college to determine whether they needed remedial English, Communications 1 or Communications 2.

Carl Eriksen, dean of Human Studies (the division running the communications program) wants to also give students a reading test and a diagnostic math test (to those students with math in their curriculum). Depending on budget restrictions he hopes to implement the two additional tests this fall.

Eriksen pointed out these tests would not be "entrance" tests. The students would already be accepted by the college.

"We want to make sure more students succeed in their programs," said Eriksen. "If a student is weak in certain areas we should get to him early and provide assistance."

Like the present Communications test, if a student's ability is at an acceptable level the student would not have to take the remedial reading and math courses.

Both Bev Walden, the Business chairman and Hugh Chesser, the Technology chairman support the implementation of a remedial math program. Currently, the technology runs its own remedial math program but Chesser said because of classroom space and timetabling problems, he favored it being taken over by the Human Studies division.

Walden also appeared enthusiastic about his incoming business students being tested for math.
