Student survey ignored

Hi! I've been here all summer? Where were you? Tanya, who spends her days at the Humber College Day Care Centre, welcomes all the new arrivals on the first day of classes.

We'll get an ice arena

By Stan Delaney

Humber College and the Borough of Etobicoke plan to share the cost of building a double surface ice arena by the fall of 1975.

College President Gordon Wragg said the Board of Governors had several meetings with representatives from the Borough. "I think we've accepted the whole idea in principle," he said, "It's a matter of working out the details."

The Borough has already allocated $500,000 for 1975 for its share of the scheme. Humber's share will have to be raised from private sources because of last year's provincial freeze on capital projects, emphasizing those involving recreational or athletic facilities.

Mr. Wragg acknowledged that the ice surface wasn't the top priority on a recent student survey, but he "hoped we can still manage to get enough student interest so that the Student Union can get behind any fund-raising activities or that the students generally would help with the fund-raising."

Last spring's survey, co-ordinated by Student Services, asked which of three non-academic capital projects they would be willing to support; an ice arena, a student centre, or an athletics and recreational fieldhouse. The results were: 412 favoured a student centre, 390 favoured an athletics and recreational fieldhouse and 231 favoured an ice arena.

Although the students' desire is for the student centre, with the new Student Union are in 4a, most of the students' requirements relative to a "so-called" student centre are being met, Mr. Wragg commented.

Consideration is being made, he explained, to "build the ice surface in such a way that a gymnasium or recreational fieldhouse could be added on later."

The Student Services survey also asked students by which means they would prefer to support any of the projects. Favoured almost equally were the utilization of reserve funds in the Student Affairs Committee (SAC) treasury and a portion of student activity fees.

"Using a reserve fund would depend on the Student Affairs Committee and probably it would require a referendum," Mr. Wragg said. He wasn't too concerned about student support. "You can't do it alone unless there is some enthusiasm for it. I don't worry much about that. It tends to be the minority that carries the ball — and the rest of them will tend to tag along."

However, at this stage, the use of student funds isn't contemplated. Mr. Wragg said he hoped the Student Union or "wherever funds are available" might make "some kind of significant contribution." We don't have to raise the full $500,000 at once. We have to raise enough so that we can borrow the balance in order to get the building up."

(See plan - page 8)

Hyne forced to resign

Peter Hyne, last year's Student Union Business Manager, was forced to resign last April by Neil Towers, Student Union President.

Mr. Towers said he told Mr. Hyne he had better quit or he would be fired for not doing his job satisfactorily.

One of Mr. Hyne's responsibilities was to keep the Student Union books. Mr. Towers said, but the U.S. secretary actually did about eighty per cent of the bookkeeping.

The former Business Manager was also blamed for the SU exceeding last year's budget by $7,000.

Mr. Hyne was criticised for using his own initiative without consulting with anyone. As an example Mr. Towers cited, concerned the wages of pub employees. The SU cabinet set wage levels for these employees when the pubs started, but the Business Manager gave employees raises without discussing it with the SU

Brenda Smallman, SU secretary, is now the Office Manager. She will be responsible for the bookkeeping, after she has completed an accounting course. Until then, an accountant from outside the College will be hired for a couple of days each month to keep the books up-to-date.

Ms. Smallman and the SU treasurer, Joe Poliwada, are responsible for the SU budgeting.

Enrollment up 13% at Humber

While other colleges and universities struggle to fill their enrollment quotas, Humber's enrollment has increased again.

According to Associate Registrar Phil Karpetz, Humber's projected enrollment is up about thirteen per cent from last year. "We hope to have in the neighborhood of 4,150 to 4,200 students at North campus, compared to about 3,600 last year," Mr. Karpetz said.

John Flegg, dean of Queensway I and II said Keelesdale, Lakeshore and Queensway campuses will have from 900 to 1700 full-time students, over 100 part-time day students, from 350 to 500 evening students, and from 150 to 300 Saturdays.

About 400 new students will be nursing students from Quo Vadis and Osler Schools of Nursing. The nursing students won't be seen at Humber, for if they registered at Osler or Quo Vadis they will take classes there.

Registration by mail has worked much more successfully than in previous years, said Mr. Karpetz. This is due in part to the new student I.D. cards, which require no pictures and were designed with mail registration in mind.

Nurses joining Humber

by Judy Fitzgerald

On September 1, Humber suddenly grew by two new campuses and about 200 new students — some of them already into their second year of training. The sudden growth came with the addition of the Osler School of Nursing at Humber Memorial Hospital and the Quo Vadis School of Nursing at the Queensway General.

The nursing schools, which will continue to maintain their own campuses, at least for the present, have joined Humber as the result of a new government policy announced last January, which declared all such schools must amalgamate with a university or community college.

The biggest problem left, after the initial fears and doubts about the feasibility of such a move were calmed, is how to fit the nursing schools' way of doing things into the methods and timetables of a community college.

"It's been a lot of work over the past few months," the chairman of the nursing program at Humber, Jocelyn Hezekiah said, "We've been working and submitting reports to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities and to the College of Nurses.

"We still have a lot of tasks ahead. The most crucial one, as I see it, is the curriculum, a sound curriculum — one that the students would like. We have a curriculum committee formed and we have to work on a new curriculum for the three schools of nursing," she said. At the moment each school has different curricula.

According to Ms. Hezekiah, long-range plans are to bring both schools of nursing to the North Campus. "Hopefully, when we get a new division in one of the phases that will be built eventually for the Health Science Division, then we might consider that."

"At the moment, it's a two-year program at Humber — Humber's present program has two academic years and two summer sessions. Tentatively, that's what the group working on the curriculum had been thinking about too," she explained.

Originally St. Joseph's School of Nursing was included in the move, but they opted to be linked downtown because of their sister school St. Michael's School of Nursing.

This exit sign illustrates the intense heat that melted all the fixtures in the field house.

Etobicoke firemen battled four blazes at Humber this summer.

The fires virtually destroyed the corridors in the second floor of the field house, but left the classrooms untouched.

Fire guts hall

An outbreak of arson at Humber College which saw Etobicoke firemen battling four different blazes last May and June cost more than $300,000.

The first and worst of the fires all believed set by someone running loose with a packet of matches, burned through the second floor corridors of the administration wing.

Fireproof doors and walls withstood intense heat that caused steel beams to bend but left the classrooms virtually untouched.

The destruction took place in three main areas. The electrical wiring providing power to the classrooms melted and had to be replaced.

The high temperatures damaged the roof which had to be reinsulated according to 1973 standards set by the Ontario Fire Marshall's office, and walls in the north and east blocks broke down and had to be redesigned.

A new fire resistant carpet has also been installed adhering to present day fire prevention standards. The old carpeting was suitable to standards set in 1968 but would not be approved today.

Harry Edmunds, director of physical resources said a massive job was cleaning up after the blazes.

"Everything was absolutely black," said Mr. Edmunds. "If you can imagine what a coal mine is like, that's what it was like just after the fires."

All the equipment was taken out and checked but very little was destroyed or damaged.

"For instance," said Mr. Edmunds, "the only damage to the enlargers in the photography lab were dirt and dust from the smoke."

Mr. Edmunds is convinced all the renovations will be completed by September 4.

Safety hazard cut

The chance of an unexpected explosion of chemicals has been reduced with the addition of an explosion-proof storage room at Humber's North Campus.

Located in the new Phase IV A building, the room is furnished with a roof that opens up to take the force of an explosion upwards. Special electrical fittings and ventilation have also been installed.

The liquid chemicals such as ether and gas were originally stored in a small basement room in the technology wing that caused one Fire Department official to remark that one careless spark "could blow the place sky-high."

The new room was designed as a spray-painting area for the Furniture and Accessories Program, however written permission from the Office of the Fire Marshall was given to use the room as a storage area for Creative Arts flammable paints and Technology Department flammable liquids.

Box 1900 is fashion

Fashion — at retail price — comes to Humber this fall with the opening of a boutique in the new Phase IVA building.

Staffed, decorated, and operated completely by students of the Fashion Careers Program, the boutique will sell student styles for both sexes.

Prices of the merchandise will be competitive with outside retail stores, according to Nancy Epner Co-ordinator of the Fashion Careers Program.

Named Box 1900 after the former address of Humber College, it will be open daily from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for students and staff interested in buying predominantly Canadian-made merchandise.

Profits from the boutique will be put back into the Applied Arts Division of Humber, where the initial funding for the project was given.

Ms. Epner, who originated the idea of the boutique over two years ago, feels the experience gained by fashion students will be invaluable since it will put them in the position of managers and buyers for a retail operation.

Parking: room for all

Parking shouldn't be any problem this year, according to Harry Edmunds, director of physical resources.

"With Creative Arts students moving to the new building, there should be sufficient space for all cars without the crowding at the front door we had last year," said

Mr. Edmunds.

Cars will require registration with the Security Department. The stickers, given free when registering, will be used to trace the driver if his car is parked illegally, or in case of an emergency or accident.

If a car is parked on a fire route it will be towed away at the owner's expense.

"We prefer to use discretion in towing cars away," Mr. Edmunds said, "We would rather notify the driver unless the car is parked in a designated fire route."

The stickers are the same as last year's so returning students won't have to register their cars.

Placement services ignored

"Operation Placement," a non-profit agency established to help students find summer jobs placed 210 Humber students this summer as of the end of July at Humber's two Operation Placement offices at Keele and Queensway II campuses.

Despite an extensive advertising campaign urging early filing of student application forms, only 400 students registered at the two Humber College offices, according to Art B. King, director of career planning and placement for the Business, Technology and Retraining and Apprenticeship Divisions.

Only ten per cent of the 9400

students registered at Keele and Queensway II were Humber students. High school students made up sixty per cent of the registrations. Thirty per cent of the total were university students.

Mr. King said there has been "a tremendous upsurge of job opportunities for this past summer over last year," but feels that the small number of registrants from Humber is a disappointment. However, many Humber students withdrew their applications because they found jobs on their own.

Staff member convicted

Ron Ushchenko, a former support staff member of Humber College, was convicted July 27 with theft and possession of stolen goods from the North campus over a four month period beginning February 1973.

Equipment worth over $2500 was stolen from the music department and technology wing.

The stolen goods were recovered police said in Mr. Ushchenko's apartment and returned to the College.

Mr. Ushchenko received a two-year suspended sentence.

HUMBER COLLEGE OF APPLIED ARTS AND TECHNOLOGY

Are you ready?

"Here is your student number. I would advise you to commit it to memory; you will need it wherever you go in Humber College."

With these words from the Office of the Registrar, you officially become a member of the Humber College community.

Bright, new, clean Humber extends a greeting to the six out of 10 students who are new to the College, and maintains a cautious, steadfast acceptance of those who are returning for more.

Yes, it's bright, because our summertime arsonist instigated a massive repainting and clean-up of the field house. New? It certainly is: after six years of being, we're still under construction. As for clean, just look at the cigarette butts and administrative forms accumulating about your feet.

When you are ready, you will discover that Humber has its share of uncertainties and issues, as does any child going through premature adolescence. At times it might get caught in the act of masturbating instead of making decisions. Without assistance from the 4,200 students now finding their way through the maze of corridors, ramps, and buildings, Humber's subsequent blindness may remain permanent.

Take a long lingering look at the eagerness of students and faculty while the novelty of Humber College life unfolds. Find some answers, share them, and become involved before scepticism once again reigns supreme.

K.S.

Minority rules

Do you have the feeling that you're being ignored lately? Perhaps you think nobody's listening to you. Well, you are right.

Humber's administration, using some shadowy rationalizations has ignored the returns from this summer's student poll on a new building and has gone ahead with its own plans.

The result of the poll showed the student centre was the most favored project with 412 votes. The field house came in a close second with 390 and the ice arena, with 231, came a poor, poor third.

It is possible though, according to President Wragg, that field house facilities could be added to the arena in the future. This proposal is supposed to give the poll some badly needed relevance. A small majority of the students favored some sort of athletic building, so we're getting one.

The fact is the College has to come up with $500,000.00, (a major part of which could be student money) by 1975 to pay its part in the project. The Borough of Etobicoke is sharing the cost with the College. We presume any money for the field house addition would have to be raised after the ice arena is paid for.

This relegates the field house idea to the realm of political bread and circuses.

It's time for the Student Union to stand up and demand a more comprehensive poll of the student body.

Let's have an effective voice in this College.

Coven to publish twice weekly

Members of the Humber College community will be seeing a lot more of Coven this year.

Coven will be distributed free of charge throughout the school twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The new headquarters for Coven is located in the new wing of Humber College, North Campus, Room L 103.

Coven encourages contributions of news, views, and letters-to-the-editor.

All copy is subject to editing. Coven reserves the right to edit all material submitted for length and libel and copyright laws.

Busing improves

Humber has added another route to its school bus service this year, making a total of 14 routes to and from the College. The new route will make a figure-eight through Malton and Westwood Village, leaving North campus at 7:50 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.

The route has taken two years to get approval. It is designed "mainly to accommodate students from out-of-town staying in Malton, not to take students away from Sheridan," said Student Affairs co-ordinator Laurie Sleith.

Humber bus rides will cost $20.00 for a semester pass or a 25-cent one-way ticket, both purchased from the general enquiries desk in the Administration building. If a student doesn't have a ticket he may hand in his I.D. card to the driver and redeem it from the enquiries desk.

There will probably be slight modifications in routes after the first few weeks of classes to adjust to changes in student housing.

"We try to be as flexible as possible in designing routes," said Mr. Sleith.

About seven per cent of student activity fees will be used to run the buses. The other sixty-five to seventy per cent of the cost will be supplied by the bus fees, according to Mr. Sleith.

The Toronto Transit Commission has also improved its service on the Wilson bus line, with buses leaving York Mills subway station every few minutes from 6:35 to 8:50 every morning and leaving Humber every few minutes from 4:13 to 6:10 every afternoon. During slack periods buses, run every 20 minutes instead of every half hour as they did last year.

South moves to Lakeshore Teachers' College

By Karen Dunbar

South campus lives-on in eight rooms and three offices in Humber's new Lakeshore campus at Lakeshore Teachers' College. South formerly James S. Bell public school, was closed last year when the lease ran out from the Etobicoke Board of Education.

Most of South's courses are now at the Lakeshore campus. Communications moved to North campus late last year and carpet laying followed in the summer. The 10 staff members and one technician have all been employed at Humber in previous years.

According to Tom Norton, dean of retraining and apprenticeship, Humber hopes to take the building over completely in a few years, when students of the Teachers' College move to one of the campuses of York University. Now Humber's section of the Teachers' College will be used by RANDA for the English as a Second Language course and academic upgrading for grades one to eight.

"I hope that if and when we take over the entire building we will have post-secondary courses at Lakeshore campus," said Mr. Norton "At the present, whether or not to have these courses at Lakeshore is a College policy decision, which the Board of Governors and the Committee on College Organization are examining."

According to Jim Davison, vice-president Academic, having post-secondary courses at Lakeshore would require more facilities than Lakeshore has now. He said the College tried courses at Keele and South, "but the resources were too lean. However, we shouldn't rule out the development of post-secondary activities in the future, particularly part-time," Mr. Davison said.

Mr. Davis said he hopes to keep drink prices the same as they were last year, at 50 cents for a bottle of beer and 85 cents for liquor.

The Humberger will be refurbished for the fall, with fixed furniture and potted trees being added.

Mr. Davis said a portable dance floor has arrived for The Pipe, and he hopes to install an ice-cream shop for dipped cones and milkshakes in the concourse.

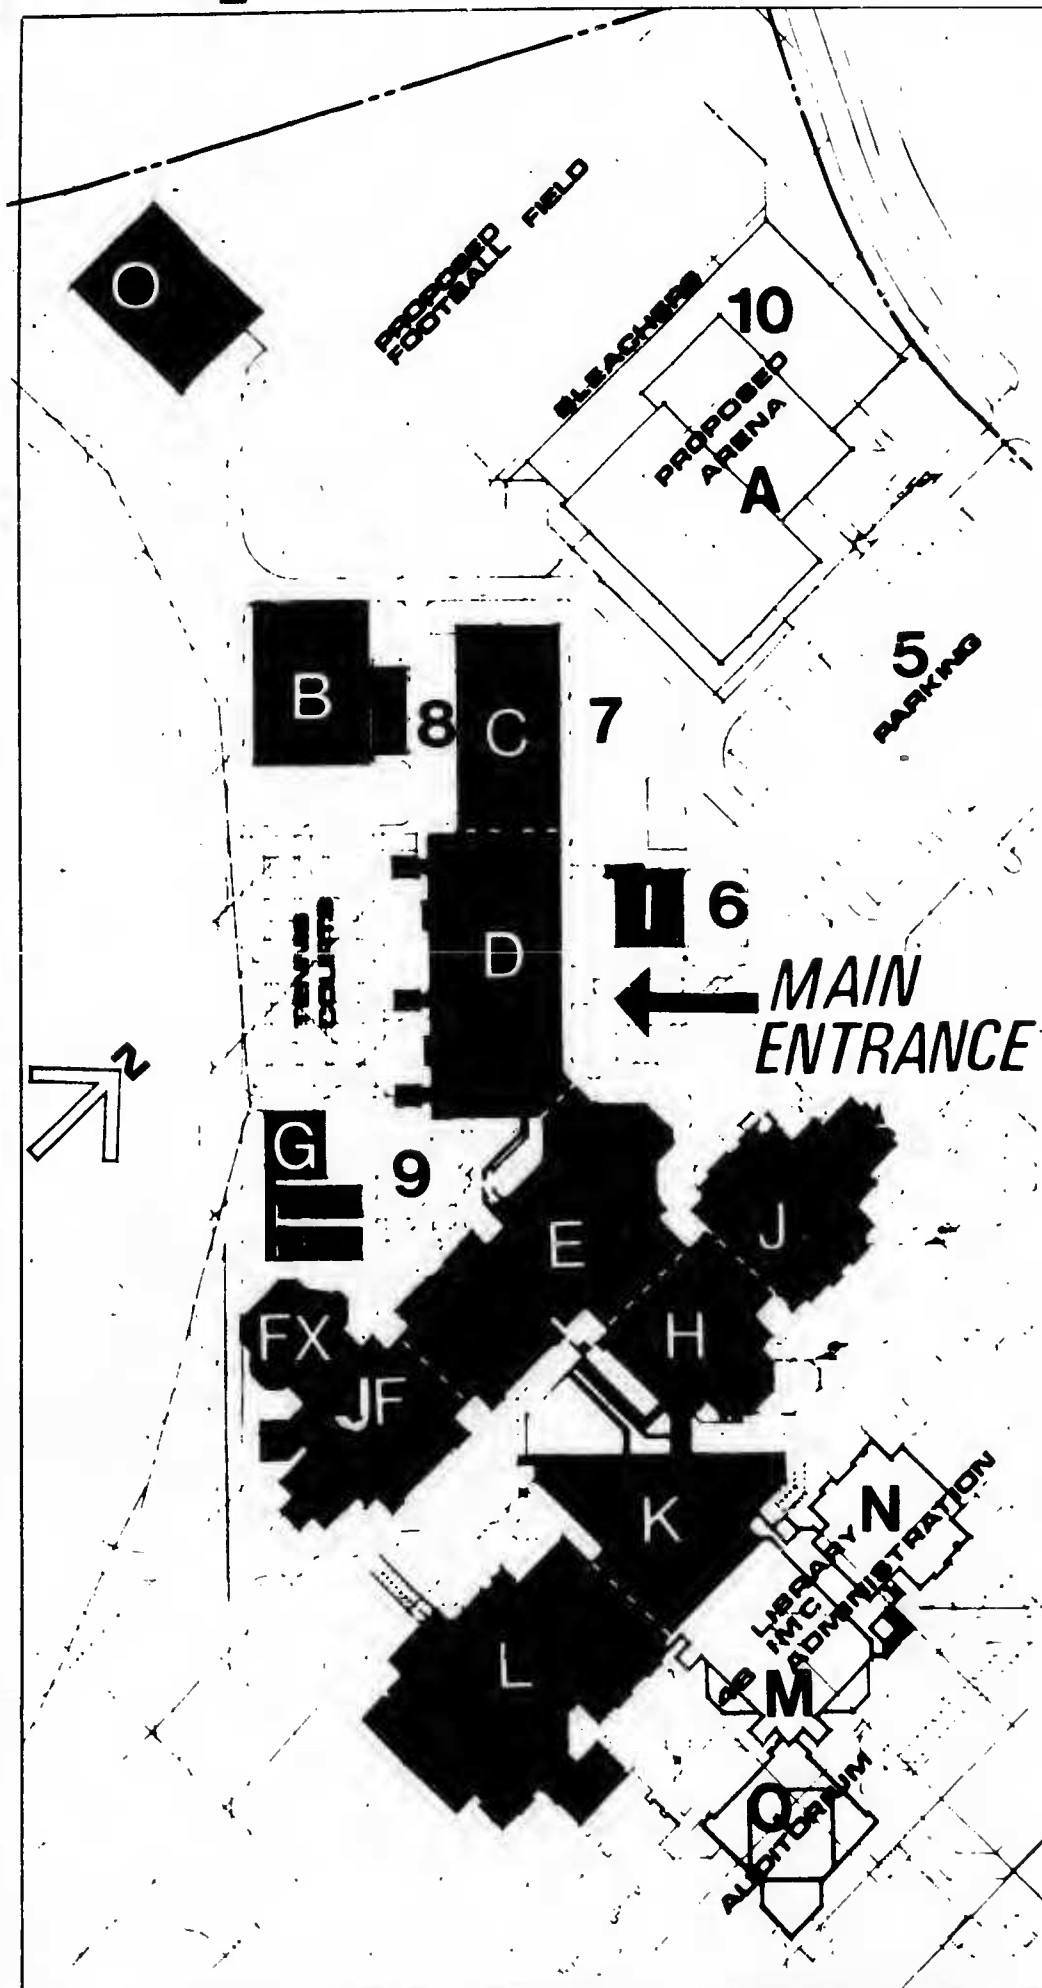

The Seventh Semester, consisting of a large banquet room and a smaller room for private functions, will feature a hot and cold buffet, with coffee and drinks supplied by table service. Mr. Davis said he hopes to have the

Three new coaches for sports

By Brian McLain

Denny McCusker has been named head coach of Humber Hawks replacing Dave Still who guided the team in its inaugural season last year.

McCusker was an assistant coach with the Hawks last season and before that coached Toronto's De La Salle High School to one championship in two years.

He quarterbacked East York Argonauts of the Ontario Rugby Football Union to three championships in a row and added another crown in three years spent with Bramalea Satellites.

McCusker's assistants will be

Vic Page, Ruddy Maclean and John McColl.

Rick Bendera, director athletics and recreation, said John Fulton will be coach of the hockey team replacing Al Landry. Mike Davies is the new men's basketball coach replacing John Cameron.

Fulton previously worked for the Etobicoke Recreation Department and Hockey Canada, Davies formerly coached Burnhamthorpe Collegiate in Etobicoke.

Other varsity coaches are Mike Scanlan, men's volleyball; Mary Lou Dresser, women's basketball and Al Landry, tennis.

Hawks tackle Waterloo in opener

Humber Hawks will clash with University of Waterloo September 7 at 2 p.m. in an exhibition game to open the 1973 football season.

All home games will be played at the North campus this season instead of at Centennial Stadium.

Practices began optionally on August 20 with the official start of training camp on August 27.

Rick Bendera, director, athletics and recreation said head coach

Denny McCusker expects at least 53 players to open at camp including eight high school all-stars, a far larger turnout than last season.

"It will be almost a brand new team this season and probably even more players will try out when the semester officially begins," said Bendera.

He explained the increased interest is due to home games being played closer to Humber and Etobicoke's dropping its inter-school athletic program.

"If a guy is about to enter Grade 13 and wants to play football, he just says to hell with it and comes to Humber instead," said Bendera.

Those who want to try out for the football team should get in contact with Al Landry, intercollegiate coordinator in the Athletics office beside the Bubble.

Athletics expand

The Athletics Department will soon move to the second floor of the administration wing when all the construction is completed.

Included on the second floor will be a billiard room with three tables, table tennis and pinball machines.

An exercise room will be available equipped with barbells, stationary bicycles and mats for yoga, karate and judo.

Meanwhile the Bubble will have an area designated for gymnastics along with two courts for tennis, basketball and badminton.

Two new dressing rooms will be added beside the Bubble along with a new training room supplied with a whirlpool bath and rubdown table.

COVEN HAS OPENINGS

FOR

SALESPERSONS

Students interested in earning top commissions to sell advertising in COVEN are required immediately. As Humber's independent student newspaper, COVEN has built a strong and loyal following among the students, and has proven its advertising worth. If you wish to become a member of the COVEN sales team, call James Smith, publisher, local 519, for further details.
